Pa. loses legal fight on meat inspection

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The federal government Tuesday won the third in a series of court battles over its takeover of Pennsylvania's meat inspection program.

U. S. District Judge R. Dixon Herman denied the state's request for a temporary restraining order against the U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

State attorneys had charged that USDA was trying to hire away state inspectors.

The federal government, which already controlled all meat sent across state lines, assumed control of the state's meat inspection program on Monday.

The action came despite appeals by the state to both the federal district and appellate courts to stop it. Another court battle is scheduled for Thursday when the state will ask Herman for an injunction returning the program to state control.

Edward Weintraub, an attorney with the state Justice Department, said all 205 state meat inspectors had been offered federal jobs either by letter or telegram.

"It was our contention," Weintraub said, "that we have a valid union agreement with our state meat inspectors and that the federal government is coming in and breaking up our employment program with full knowledge that they are under contract."

"We have a four-year investment in those people. We are not going to give up easily."

Attorney General J. Shane Creamer said the job offers proved the state deserves to maintain control of the meat inspection.

"The whole basis for the federal government's grab was that Pennsylvania had neither the manpower nor the competency to handle this job, and that the federal government had both," Creamer said. "Now they want to hire our people. Their original argument didn't hold water and this proves it."

Weintraub said no resignations have yet been received. All of the inspectors have been assigned to "interim" jobs pending the final outcome of the court battles.

The USDA decided to take over the state's meat inspection program several months ago when it was the subject of a budget fight.

Gov. Milton J. Shapp, in an effort to reduce spending, proposed that the entire program be eliminated and handed over to the federal government.

When small meat packers protested, he changed his mind and $1.4 million was included in the 1972-73 budget.

Cabinet member resigns

LONDON — Britain's Home Secretary Reginald Maudling, the number two man in Prime Minister Edward Heath's Conservative Party has resigned pending an investigation into the financial affairs of his business associate John Poulson, who recently filed bankruptcy. During the bankruptcy hearings, Poulson said he gave $825,000 to members of Parliament and civil servants but won't explain the purpose of the payments. Robert Carr, leader of the House of Commons, was named to succeed Maudling.

Heart disease fight funded

WASHINGTON — The House passed legislation Tuesday to expand federal programs against heart disease with a $1.29 billion three-year program. Also passed were bills to extend help to states and communities to fight venereal disease, rubella and other communicable diseases.

Telephone service disrupted

NEW YORK — Long distance telephone communications over much of the East Coast was disrupted for five hours when a construction crew accidentally cut through a six inch underground coaxial cable in southern New Jersey Tuesday. The cable was part of the linkup between Boston and Miami. From the time of the break, East Coast long distance callers heard busy signals in trying to make their connections.

Prisoners rebel

UPPER MARLBORO — A group of prisoners rebelled against their keepers and seized three hostages in a disturbance Tuesday night at the Prince Georges County jail, where Arthur Herman Bremmer awaits trial on charges of shooting Alabama Gov. George Wallace. Police would not identify the hostages or describe the scene inside the jail, but they said the disturbance was confined to the third floor, well away from Bremmer's first floor cell. One officer said about 150 inmates joined in the disturbance after being released from their cells by a prisoner who had obtained keys.

Electricity cut off in Brooklyn

Power crisis hits New York

NEW YORK (UPI) — Electrical power was cut off to 300,000 New Yorkers for 13 hours Tuesday as the city sweltered in 90 degree temperatures.

The outage, put into effect by utility officials to prevent what they said could be massive overload failures, was the worst since the 1965 Northeast power blackout.

"We're still in a very tight power situation," warned a spokesman for Consolidated Edison in a plea to New Yorkers to use only what electricity was absolutely necessary.

The outage later Tuesday reduced power by 5 per cent to parts of Manhattan, Brooklyn and Queens as the heat wave continued. It was the second consecutive day Con Ed cut back voltage.

The blackout, centered in Brooklyn, affected five hospitals and two police stations—all of which switched to emergency generators. Many shopkeepers along the main business streets in the seven-square mile darkened area spent the night sitting in front of their stores. There were reports of some rock throwing by groups of youths and beefed up police patrols arrested six looters.

Power was cut off by the utility from 9:53 p.m. Monday to 11:04 a.m. EDT following the failure of six of a network of ten 27,000-volt feeder cables carrying electricity from a substation into the area. Consolidated Edison employees worked through the night to get the lines back in service.

The exact cause of the failure was not immediately determined.

"To prevent additional damage in the network and to make repairs on the already damaged cables (this the cutting off of all power) was the route we had to take. It simply was the prudent thing to do," said Con Ed spokesman.

But Edna Perman, an employee of Homemakers Uptown Inc. located in the blackout area and one of the hundreds of thousands of persons affected by the failure, said the outage "never should have happened."

"Over the winter they (Con Ed) should have been able to project such a heat wave like this and taken care of it. This never should have happened. They should have prevented it," said Mrs. Perman.

CAIRO (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat, who signed a 15-year-treaty of friendship and cooperation with Moscow last year, announced Tuesday he has ordered Soviet military advisers and experts withdrawn, the semi-official Middle East News Agency reported.

Sadat said the action was part of a series of moves aiming at a new stage in Egyptian-Soviet relations.

In a 90-minute speech before the Central Committee of the Arab Socialist Union (ASU), Sadat said the main aim of Egyptian foreign policy had been to achieve the best possible relations with the Soviet Union.

"This was a basic line in our policy," Sadat said, "because our main enemy is Israel..."

Sadat, however, had high praise for the Soviet Union which he said "stood with us in all fields, political, economic and military." But he said Egypt now had to revise its policies.

The Middle East News Agency said the committee voted unanimously to support Sadat in his decisions.

The agency said Sadat announced that military installations and equipment installed by the Soviets was Egyptian property and would be operated henceforth by the Egyptian armed forces.

An estimated 20,000 Soviet military advisers and technicians have been helping to man Egypt's missile and air defense system against Israel.

Sadat said that consultations are going on to decide the style of cooperation which will be most effective in the future.

Sadat said termination of the Soviet military mission was at Egypt's request and was effective as of Monday, July 17.

"Our sons in the armed forces will replace them in everything they did," Sadat said.

Official Cairo sources said Sadat as telling the Central Committee during the two and one-half hour meeting in Cairo earlier in the day:

"The news agency quoted Sadat as telling the Central Committee during the two and one-half hour meeting in Cairo earlier in the day:

"After studying the position from all its angles and with full appreciation of the huge Soviet aid to us and concern for Soviet friendship, I found it appropriate at the outset of a new stage of that friendship to take these decisions:

"A decision to end, with effect from July 17, the mission of the Soviet military advisers and experts who came at our request. Our sons in the armed forces will replace them in everything they did."

"The military installations and equipment which were established on Egyptian soil after the June 1967 war are considered the private property of Egypt and are under the operation of our armed forces.

"A call within the framework of the Egyptian-Soviet friendship treaty for an Egyptian-Soviet meeting at a level to be agreed upon later to hold consultations concerning the coming stage."

Sidky flew to Moscow last Thursday for what was scheduled to be a three-day visit. But he returned to Cairo on Saturday.

U.S. officials skeptical over wholesale troop pullout

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Nixon administration — from the White House to the State Department to the Pentagon — refused comment Tuesday on Egypt's reported decision to order Soviet military advisers and technicians withdrawn from its territory.

But American officials privately indicated they were skeptical of any wholesale Russian pullout from Egypt and they cautioned against hasty conclusions that the Soviet Union had suffered a decisive setback to its prestige and influence in the Middle East.

These officials said they did not have enough information yet to fully assess the significance of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's actions, as reported by the semi-official Middle East News Agency.

For one thing, it was noted, the Soviet "military advisers and experts" that Sadat said would be replaced by "our sons in the Egyptian armed forces" represent only part of the 20,000-member Russian force which has been on Egyptian soil.

American officials questioned if Sadat's announcement meant an intention to oust the thousands of Soviet servicemen who man the Surface-to-Air (SAM) missiles upon which Egypt is dependent for protection against any deep Israeli air strikes, as well as to send home the Russian pilots who have flown advanced MIG jets from Egyptian bases.

At the State Department, Press Officer John King was asked about the Cairo announcement and replied: "I will have no comment, interpretation or other remarks to make."

President Nixon's press secretary, Ronald L. Ziegler, and an official spokesman for the Defense Department similarly declined to answer questions about the possible rupture in Egyptian-Soviet relations.

U.S. firm makes pact with Soviets

LONDON (UPI) — President Nixon's springtime Moscow visit bore fruit Tuesday in a wide-ranging, five-year scientific and technical agreement between the Soviet Union and a major U.S. petroleum company.

Financial sources said the accord, which includes provisions for oil production and the construction of hotels in the Soviet Union, was valued at about $3 billion.

Dr. Armand Hammer, chairman of American Occidental Petroleum Co., and the pact's chief architect, announced the agreement at a London conference.

"In all my 51 years' relationship with the Soviet Union I have never known the ground to be more favorable for the expansion of East-West trade than exists at present," he said.

American-born Hammer first traveled to Russia in the years just after the 1917 Communist Revolution and established 37 concessions for U.S. firms.

V. I. Lenin, father of the revolution, personally permitted Hammer, now 75, to set up the Soviet Union's first pencil factory both for the domestic market and for export.

Hammer said the Occidental agreement was signed in

It covers exploration, production and usage of oil and gas, agricultural fertilizers and chemicals, metal treating and plating, design and construction of hotels, plus utilization of solid wastes.

Indian matters

McGovern denies support for revolt against Meany

CUSTER, S.D. (UPI) — Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., said Tuesday he was in no sense supporting an AFL-CIO revolt against President George Meany, but criticized the Teamsters Union for its endorsement of President Nixon.

McGovern, vacationing here in the Black Hills, told newsmen he had sent out 30 letters to members of the AFL-CIO Council with a "warm, friendly" message and, I hope, convincing argument that they should endorse his candidacy for President.

But he said he was not supporting "in the slightest" any revolt against Meany's leadership, including threats by AFL-CIO member unions to withhold their political contributions from the association until they receive assurances that McGovern will get some of the money.

McGovern said he did not think Daley's endorsement of him Monday was half-hearted. He said Daley was disappointed that the Cook County delegation he led was not seated at the convention and "what I think is a tribute to him is that he so quickly recovered."

He said Daley "asked me to come see him in a few weeks and I told him I would." But he said no definite date had been set for the meeting.

Meanwhile, the 180,000 member Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union endorsed McGovern. The executive board of the Denver-based union pledged its aid to McGovern in the 42 states where the union has members. The endorsement was not a surprise since OCAW President A.F. Grosipson announced his personal backing May 3.

Tuesday McGovern was mobbed by camera clicking tourists at Mt. Rushmore, had a long talk with an Indian chief, bought a $140 turquoise bracelet for his wife and spoke from a truck bed to several hundred people at an impromptu rally arranged by a Republican businessman in Hill City, S.D.

Angry Sinatra gives testimony

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Frank Sinatra, bristling with anger, accused the House Select Committee on Crime Tuesday of committing character assassination by permitting a witness to link him with the Mafia. "I resent it. I'm not a second class citizen. Let's get that straight," Sinatra declared within seconds of taking the witness stand in the huge House Caucus room which was filled to capacity for the entertainer's appearance.

His public tongue-lashing of the committee drew gasps of astonishment from the spectators and a semblance of apology from committee counsel Joseph Phillips.

The movie star and singer, now retired, asserted that testimony by Joseph "The Baron" Barboza, a former underworld figure, on May 24 was hearsay. Barboza sought to connect Sinatra with a New England crime syndicate headed by Raymond Patriarca.

"This bum went running off at the mouth," Sinatra snapped. He then held up a newspaper headline reading "Witness Links Sinatra To Reputed Mafia Figure" and exclaimed sarcastically: "That's all charming. And that's all

Jury indicts hijackers

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Two men accused of hijacking a National Airlines jetliner here last Wednesday and holding 113 passengers and a crew of six hostage for nine hours were indicted by a federal grand jury Tuesday.

The indictments were handed down against Lulseyd Tesfa, 22, a former Howard University student from Ethiopia, and Stanley Green, 34, a Washington, D.C., parking lot attendant.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Clayton Undercoffler said the men were enroute from Houston, Tex., to Philadelphia, where they would also face an assortment of local charges.

The men surrendered to the FBI a day later on a small airstrip at Lake Jackson, Tex., while aboard a second National Airlines jet commandeered when the first plane developed electrical problems and exhausted its fuel supply.

The two allegedly took over National's Flight 496 enroute from Miami to New York and forced it to land at Philadelphia International airport, where they demanded and received $600,000 in ransom and parachutes and the second craft.

Fischer wins battle over TV, chess match ends in draw

REYKJAVIK (UPI) — U.S. challenger Bobby Fischer won a battle over television cameras Tuesday night but had to settle for a draw with Boris Spassky after 46 moves in a seesaw fourth game of the world chess championships.

Spassky offered the draw with a simple inclination of his head after Fischer made his 46th move, a pawn to his queen bishop three, and Fischer accepted immediately. The two shook hands across the table and Fischer got up with his glass of orange juice in his hand and strode from the hall.

The draw left Spassky with a 2 1/2 point to 1 1/2 point advantage over the American challenger in the 24-game, $250,000 world championship.

The fifth game is scheduled for Thursday at 5 p.m. (1 p.m. EDT).

Fischer started the game with his almost inevitable king pawn opening and Spassky responded with a Sicilian defense, a rare move for the Russian.

The American, who earlier had once again threatened not to play unless all television cameras were removed from the hall, held a pawn advantage after 20 moves but a dubious 19th move gave the initiative to Spassky.

The Russian, whose loss to Fischer Sunday and Monday night, was his first in 12 years of playing Fischer, quickly leaped to the attack and had a slight position advantage in the middle game.

However, experts said a dubious move by Spassky lost him that initiative and the game headed for an almost certain draw.

Spassky played quickly in the opening moves, taking only three minutes to complete his first 10 moves. However, he slowed down later and took more than half an hour on the 19th move alone.

Neither Fischer nor Spassky was present when Schmid started the American's clock and the game. But Fischer showed up within four minutes and Spassky arrived a few minutes later.

Fischer immediately went to the board, looked at it briefly and moved. His opening was hardly a surprise. In thousands of games Fischer has only varied from the king pawn opening a half dozen times or so.

Once asked why he always used the king pawn opening, Fischer said, "Because it's the best move."

Ship damaged by explosions

SAIGON (UPI) — The U.S. Navy destroyer Warrington was heavily damaged by explosions below its waterline when it moved in toward the blockaded North Vietnamese coast to shell cargo barges, the U.S. command said Tuesday.

The explosions caused such extensive damage the Warrington was forced off the blockade line, spokesmen said. The cause of the explosions was not immediately determined and possibly would await arrival of the ship at Subic Bay naval base in the Philippines where it was being towed for repair.

One sailor was injured by the blasts, which were described only as "underwater explosions" from unknown sources.

In the war in South Vietnam, a small unit of government paratroopers pushed to within 50 yards of the Communist-held, stone-walled citadel in Quang Tri Tuesday in their campaign to recapture the country's northernmost provincial capital. Field reports said.

Most of the 1,500 South Vietnamese troops inside the city, however, were still spread throughout a district ranging from six blocks to one mile from the 19th century fortress. The three-battalion force, each accompanied by one American adviser, fought in the streets and against some entrenched Communist positions in the capital, a city 400 miles north of Saigon that once had a population of 25,000.

By an overwhelming 75 to 7 margin, the Senate voted to attach an amendment earmarking funds for that purpose to the foreign military assistance authorization bill.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., author of the amendment, said the amount was double what the Agency for International Development had planned.

"As long as we are willing to provide funds for bombs and military activities in South Vietnam, it is essential that we specifically provide funds to help the millions of South Vietnamese civilians affected by this endless war," he said.

high point of the offensive launched March 30.

There were no reports of casualties in fighting Tuesday, but the command said two U.S. Air Force F4 Phantom planes "accidentally fired on" South Vietnamese troops outside the city Monday and wounded four. In a similar incident July 6, there were 11 South Vietnamese killed and 25 wounded.

Mansfield hits Thai troop count

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield charged Tuesday that the United States has—or will shortly have—more troops in Thailand than in South Vietnam.

Mansfield said "what we're doing is building up in Thailand and taking credit for a drawdown in Vietnam."

Speaking in the Senate, Mansfield conceded "there has been a tremendous drawdown of U.S. personnel" in Vietnam from a high of 550,000; but he said that as the U.S. force has become smaller in Vietnam it has grown in Thailand to 45,000 to 50,000.

Noting that President Nixon has announced further withdrawals which would cut U.S. strength in Vietnam to 39,000 Sept. 1, Mansfield said the Thailand force "if it does not exceed the total in South Vietnam, it will shortly."

800 inmates refuse to leave cells

Attica under state of emergency

ATTICA, N.Y. (UPI) — The superintendent of Attica prison declared a temporary state of emergency Tuesday as some 800 of the facility's 1,200 inmates refused to leave their cells in a protest of conditions similar to those triggering last September's bloody riot in which 43 persons died.

The indictments were handed down against Lulseyd Tesfa, 22, a former Howard University student from Ethiopia, and Stanley Green, 34, a Washington, D.C., parking lot attendant.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Clayton Undercoffler said the men were enroute from Houston, Tex., to Philadelphia, where they would also face an assortment of local charges.

The two allegedly took over National's Flight 496 enroute from Miami to New York and forced it to land at Philadelphia International airport, where they demanded and received $600,000 in ransom and parachutes and the second craft.

Montayne cancelled visitation rights at the 42-year-old facility and said the emergency order would be rescinded when "the situation at the facility has reached its conclusion."

It was the second day a majority of the prison's inmate population refused to leave their cells to eat or work.

"We look at this as a relatively serious problem at this point in time," said Gerald T. Houlihan, chief State Corrections Department spokesman. "We keep asking them to come out and they keep refusing."

We'll keep asking and they'll keep refusing for as long as this thing lasts.

"We feel that we have an emergency situation on our hands whenever you have 800 inmates locking themselves in their cells," said Houlihan.

The strike initially was sparked when Mary Kingsley, a popular nurse at the prison, was laid off. She was reinstated Monday night.

"At this point, we honestly don't know why they are doing it. There has been no formal explanation," Houlihan said.

The inmates, he said, have made no effort to use their prisoners' liaison committee set up after the Sept. 9-13 rebellion.

But the Attica Defense Committee, a group of lawyers and students representing Attica inmates, said it received a copy of a petition circulated among prisoners listing 10 complaints, including lack of adequate clothing and others first made during the September rebellion. It also accused the state of failing to implement 28 of the demands made during the prison riot.

Houlihan said State Corrections Commissioner Russell G. Oswald had no plans to go to the prison and met with the inmates as he did 10 months ago.

Prison guards hold work stoppage

BALTIMORE (UPI) — One hundred and thirty guards, claiming they feared for their safety, conducted a three-hour work stoppage at the riot-scarred Maryland Penitentiary Tuesday in a protest of the tactics of Gov. Marvin Mandel.

They returned to work after a committee of guards met with Maryland Secretary of Public Safety Robert Lally who assured them Mandel was not granting amnesty to inmates who participated in Monday's uprising.

Four persons were injured and a building was severely damaged by fire in the disorder that came less than two days after rioting inmates did $2 million damage to the House of Correction at Jessup, Md. Lally said the damage to the penitentiary was "significantly lower" than the damage at the Jessup facility.

Mandel, who negotiated peaceful settlements of both disorders, summoned Lally and the wardens of all state penal facilities to his office for a meeting this morning.

Can your bread pass this test?

Flex Test
Feel Sunbeam's flexible freshness!

Batter Whipped Sunbeam dares to be compared!

Why is Sunbeam called "The Fresh One?"

Because it's made differently. For finer texture . . . velvety softness.

Sunbeam is Batter Whipped Bread. Mixed in small batches. Actually whipped, like cream. Air holes (where staling air can hide) are whipped out.

Result: bread that looks fresher. Feels fresher. Toasts fresher. Tastes fresher.

Compare Batter Whipped Sunbeam with the bread you're now using. Let your eyes, your sense of touch -- and your taste--convince you that Sunbeam is a truly superior bread. Try a loaf, today.

Angry Sinatra gives testimony

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Frank Sinatra, bristling with anger, accused the House Select Committee on Crime Tuesday by committing character assassination by permitting a witness to link him with the Mafia. "I resent it. I'm not a second class citizen. Let's get that straight," Sinatra declared within seconds of taking the witness stand in the huge House Caucus room which was filled to capacity for the entertainer's appearance.

His public tongue-lashing of the committee drew gasps of astonishment from the spectators and a semblance of apology from committee counsel Joseph Phillips.

The movie star and singer, now retired, asserted that testimony by Joseph "The Baron" Barboza, a former underworld figure, on May 24 was hearsay. Barboza sought to connect Sinatra with a New England crime syndicate headed by Raymond Patriarca.

"This bum went running off at the mouth," Sinatra snapped. He then held up a newspaper headline reading "Witness Links Sinatra To Reputed Mafia Figure" and exclaimed sarcastically: "That's all charming. And that's all hearsay testimony, isn't it?" "Yes, it is," Phillips conceded.

Phillips and Committee Chairman Claude D. Pepper, D-Fla., acknowledged the veteran show-world star had a right to complain about Barboza's public testimony. But they said they had not expected him to make his charges against Sinatra and had no way of knowing whether they were true or not.

Fischer wins battle over TV, chess match ends in draw

REYKJAVIK (UPI) — U.S. challenger Bobby Fischer won a battle over television cameras Tuesday night but had to settle for a draw with Boris Spassky after 46 moves in a see-saw fourth game of the world chess championships.

Spassky offered the draw with a simple inclination of his head after Fischer made his 46th move, a pawn to his queen bishop three, and Fischer accepted immediately. The two shook hands across the table and Fischer got up with his glass of orange juice in his hand and strode from the hall.

The draw left Spassky with a 2 1/2 point to 1 1/2 point advantage over the American challenger in the 24-game, $250,000 world championship.

The fifth game is scheduled for Thursday at 5 p.m. (1 p.m. EDT).

Fischer started the game with his almost inevitable king pawn opening and Spassky responded with a Sicilian defense, a rare move for the Russian.

The American, who earlier had once again threatened not to play unless all television cameras were removed from the hall, held a pawn advantage after 20 moves but a dubious 19th move gave the initiative to Spassky.

The Russian, whose loss to Fischer Sunday and Monday night, was his first in 12 years of playing Fischer, quickly leaped to the attack and had a slight position advantage in the middle game.

However, experts said a dubious move by Spassky lost him that initiative and the game headed for an almost certain draw.

Spassky played quickly in the opening moves, taking only three minutes to complete his first 10 moves. However, he slowed down later and took more than half an hour on the 19th move alone.

Neither Fischer nor Spassky was present when Schmid started the American's clock and the game. But Fischer showed up within four minutes and Spassky arrived a few minutes later.

Fischer immediately went to the board, looked at it briefly and moved. His opening was hardly a surprise. In thousands of games Fischer has only varied from the king pawn opening a half dozen times or so.

Once asked why he always used the king pawn opening, Fischer said, "Because it's the best move."

Ship damaged by explosions

SAIGON (UPI) — The U.S. Navy destroyer Warrington was heavily damaged by explosions below its waterline when it moved in toward the blockaded North Vietnamese coast to shell cargo barges, the U.S. command said Tuesday.

The explosions caused such extensive damage the Warrington was forced off the blockade line, spokesmen said. The cause of the explosions was not immediately determined and possibly would await arrival of the ship at Subic Bay naval base in the Philippines where it was being towed for repair.

One sailor was injured by the blasts, which were described only as "underwater explosions" from unknown sources.

In the war in South Vietnam, a small unit of government paratroopers pushed to within 50 yards of the Communist-held, stone-walled citadel in Quang Tri Tuesday in their campaign to recapture the country's northernmost provincial capital, field reports said. Most of the 1,500 South Vietnamese troops inside the city, however, were still spread throughout a district ranging from six blocks to one mile from the 19th century fortress. The three-battalion force, each accompanied by one American adviser, fought in the streets and against some entrenched Communist positions in the capital, a city 400 miles north of Saigon that once had a population of 25,000.

Speaking in the Senate, Mansfield conceded "there has been a tremendous drawdown of U.S. personnel" in Vietnam from a high of 550,000; but he said that as the U.S. force has become smaller in Vietnam it has grown in Thailand to 45,000 to 50,000.

Noting that President Nixon has announced further withdrawals which would cut U.S. strength in Vietnam to 39,000 Sept. 1, Mansfield said the Thailand force "if it does not exceed the total in South Vietnam, it will shortly."

The North Vietnamese capture of Quang Tri and the surrounding province of the same name on May 1 was the high point of the offensive launched March 30.

There were no reports of casualties in fighting Tuesday, but the command said two U.S. Air Force F4 Phantom planes "accidentally fired on" South Vietnamese troops outside the city Monday and wounded four. In a similar incident July 6, there were 11 South Vietnamese killed and 25 wounded.

Mansfield hits Thai troop count

Miss Pocono Pageant set for presentation Aug. 4-5

HAWLEY — The pageant to select Miss Pocono 1973 will be held on Aug. 4-5 in the Richard Porter Auditorium of the Wallenpaupack Area High School, Hawley.

The Miss Pocono Pageant is a local preliminary to the Miss Pennsylvania and Miss America Pageants, and it has a similar scholarship program.

The young women who place in the various competitions are rewarded with educational grants to the colleges of their choice, paid directly to the college. If any of the winners do not register at a college for further education, the money remains in the Scholarship Fund.

Fourteen young women from Monroe, Pike, Wayne and Lackawanna Counties will compete for the title of Miss Pocono 1973, and they are now rehearsing under the direction of Robert Howell of the Drama Department of East Stroudsburg State College.

Judging of the pageant will be on the basis of poise, personality, beauty, intelligence and talent.

Tickets may be obtained by calling Mrs. Lucille Smith, 717-676-3631.

P.M. High teacher at chemistry institute

BRUNSWICK, Me. — E. James Morris, Reeder, a teacher at Pocono Mountain High School in Swiftwater, is among a select group of secondary school teachers attending the 1972 Summer Institute in Chemistry at Bowdoin College in Brunswick, Me.

A native of East Stroudsburg, Morris holds a B.S. degree from East Stroudsburg State College and an M.S. degree from the University of Pennsylvania.

Morris has been teaching in the Pocono Mountain Schools since 1961. He is married to the former Vivian I. Baker of Bristol, Pa.

Supported by the National Science Foundation the Bowdoin Institute began June 25 and will continue through August 4 under the direction of Professor David A. Wheatland of the Bowdoin Chemistry Department. The course is entitled "The Chemical Study of Environmental Problems."

The schedule includes lectures, reading, discussions, problem work and laboratory experiments in the field of physical chemistry.

Flood relief head named

HARRISBURG — Edward A. Holmes, of Hershey, has been placed in charge of all flood relief activities of the Pennsylvania Department of Commerce.

State Secretary of Commerce Walter G. Arader, in designating Holmes as Disaster Relief Board Coordinator, said he also would manage the ad hoc committee named for the Department in the wake of the flood which inflicted an estimated $1.4 million in damages to the State's business community.

Holmes' service in the temporary emergency position will be in addition to his regular position as director of the Department's Bureau of Business Services.

He began his apprenticeship in his father's shop in Wilkes-Barre in 1928, becoming a member of the firm of F.J. Ney and Son until he retired from the business in 1966. His father passed away in 1960.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fifth in a series of articles that will be run throughout the summer on preparing for the West End Fair.)

By MAUREEN RUFFE
Pocono Record Reporter

GILBERT — Have you ever turned your dress inside out to look at the way it's made on the inside? According to West End Fair volunteer Mrs. Donald Everitt, that's exactly what the West End Fair judges do before they award prizes in the sewing division.

"In order to win a prize at the West End Fair everything on the inside of a garment must look as nice as on the outside," said Mrs. Everitt. "So many people enter things and they don't realize that the facings, hems and seams should all be finished."

In further comments, the Effort housewife, who has been helping at the West End Fair for eight years, said that articles must be clean and must be made within the last year.

She stressed that little things, such as hooks and eyes, mean a lot to the judges and she emphasized that items should not be entered that could not remain in the exhibition hall until the end of the fair.

When asked about new fashions that had no particular categories in the fair book, Mrs. Everitt said they would fall into the miscellaneous group.

Different categories
"There are so many different fashions today such as pants suits, hot pants, three-piece suits," she said, "that we have to make up separate categories for the judging."

She agreed that many categories were outmoded but said the listing was set by the state and therefore, the fair association could do little to update the entry list.

In the arts and crafts division, the volunteer stressed that all pictures should be framed. Otherwise, the judges would consider the artwork unfinished.

She related that paint-by-numbers type entries were judged in a class apart from that containing original work.

In the crocheted and knitted category, Mrs. Everitt said it was essential that ends be worked in completely and that all the stitches be even. She emphasized that in crocheted work, the entrant would have to know what was the right and wrong side and explained that the right side was the side facing you as you were finishing the article.

According to the Effort worker, the judges many times are influenced by their individual tastes.

"Sometimes," she conceded, "they may award a prize on the basis of color."

Admittedly they are supposed to be completely impartial, but Mrs. Everitt said that would be impossible because of basic human nature.

In terms of entries being stolen or broken, Mrs. Everitt said the fair has not had many incidents in this respect. She advised people not to enter valuable ceramic pieces, however, because they would be displayed openly for the five-day fair.

As was the case last year, all the sewing and arts and crafts entries will be covered with clear plastic as an extra protective measure.

In terms of daily entries, Mrs. Everitt said contestants should not mount them on card board or paper.

Commenting on the best time to place entries in the fair, the Effort housewife said that the earlier the better. She suggested that people come on Monday night to register rather than waiting til the last minute on Tuesday morning.

Trash collection pact set by Portland boro council

PORTLAND — Portland Borough Council Monday awarded a new three-year contract to collect borough garbage to Perin Sanitation Company for a bid of $19,728. The only other bid entered was that of the High Point Sanitation Company for $64,800.

The Perin Company will make two regular pick-ups per week and eight pick-ups a year with their open-body truck for large items not readily collectable.

The cost for garbage collection per family unit will be $32 the first year and $30 for each of the following two years.

The additional $2 fee the first year will pay for attorney's fees, mailing, and stationary supplies that will be incurred for billing residents.

The garbage tax will be payable within 90 days of October 1, 1972, or a five percent penalty will be added.

Gladys Carpenter, Portland tax collector, was retained to compile a billing list of all local residents excluding industrial and commercial establishments.

Printer to address Rotarians

MOUNT POCONO — John Ney, printer-historian of the Centennial Print Shop at Memorytown, U.S.A., will be principal speaker for the Pocono Mountain Rotary Club at 6:15 p.m. today at the Pocono Top Hat Restaurant.

A native of Wilkes-Barre and presently a Mount Pocono resident, Ney has a background of craftsmanship of 45 years in the graphic arts field. He first came to Memorytown in 1972 and has opened the first and only Civil War Print Shop in the eastern United States at the resort area.

He began his apprenticeship in his father's shop in Wilkes-Barre in 1928, becoming a member of the firm of F.J. Ney and Son until he retired from the business in 1966. His father passed away in 1960.

GILBERT — Have you ever turned your dress inside out to look at the way it's made on the inside? According to West End Fair volunteer Mrs. Donald Everitt, that's exactly what the West End Fair judges do before they award prizes in the sewing division.

"In order to win a prize at the West End Fair everything on the inside of a garment must look as nice as on the outside," said Mrs. Everitt. "So many people enter things and they don't realize that the facings, hems and seams should all be finished."

In further comments, the Effort housewife, who has been helping at the West End Fair for eight years, said that articles must be clean and must be made within the last year.

She stressed that little things, such as hooks and eyes, mean a lot to the judges and she emphasized that items should not be entered that could not remain in the exhibition hall until the end of the fair.

When asked about new fashions that had no particular categories in the fair book, Mrs. Everitt said they would fall into the miscellaneous group.

Different categories

"There are so many different fashions today such as pants suits, hot pants, three-piece suits," she said, "that we have to make up separate categories for the judging."

She agreed that many categories were outmoded but said the listing was set by the state and therefore, the fair association could do little to update the entry list.

In the arts and crafts division, the volunteer stressed that all pictures should be framed. Otherwise, the judges would consider the artwork unfinished.

She related that paint-by-numbers type entries were judged in a class apart from that containing original work.

In the crocheted and knitted category, Mrs. Everitt said it was essential that ends be worked in completely and that all the stitches be even. She emphasized that in crocheted work, the entrant would have to know what was the right and wrong side and explained that the right side was the side facing you as you were finishing the article.

As was the case last year, all the sewing and arts and crafts entries will be covered with clear plastic as an extra protective measure.

In terms of doily entries, Mrs. Everitt said contestants should not mount them on card board or paper.

Commenting on the best time to place entries in the fair, the Effort housewife said that the earlier the better. She suggested that people come on Monday night to register rather than waiting til the last minute on Tuesday morning.

Trash collection pact set by Portland boro council

PORLTAND — Portland Borough Council Monday awarded a new three-year contract to collect borough garbage to Perin Sanitation Company for a bid of $19,728. The only other bid entered was that of the High Point Sanitation Company for $64,800.

The Perin Company will make two regular pick-ups per week and eight pick-ups a year with their open-body truck for large items not readily collectable.

The cost for garbage collection per family unit will be $32

the first year and $30 for each of the following two years.

The additional $2 fee the first year will pay for attorney's fees, mailing, and stationary supplies that will be incurred for billing residents.

The garbage tax will be payable within 90 days of October 1, 1972, or a five percent penalty will be added.

Gladys Carpenter, Portland tax collector, was retained to compile a billing list of all local residents excluding industrial and commercial establishments.

Good question, Mr. Garrison

We received a letter the other day from a very puzzled and angered Brent C. Garrison of Stroudsburg. He had a question, and an appropriate one in this election year.

Why, he wanted to know, since George Wallace placed second in the April 25 Pennsylvania primary, did he receive only two delegate votes at the Democratic National Convention?

Especially puzzling to Mr. Garrison was the fact that Sen. George McGovern, who finished well behind Wallace in the primary, had 81 delegate votes at the convention. He answers his own question on that one! When things began going the McGovern way, Muskie and Humphrey delegates switched.

As for Wallace's two delegates, well, they were the only delegates on the slate to run as Wallace delegates. Pennsylvania's primary is basically a presidential preference primary. The total of votes simply serves as an indication of how popular the man is.

Several other states have such primaries. They are nothing more than popularity contests and have no bearing on how many delegates the man collects. What counts in states like this is a good organization to prompt a number of local people to run as delegates either committed to one candidate or another, or as uncommitted delegates (in other words, people voting for them want them to cast their vote for whomever looks good at the convention).

Despite the reforms in the Democratic Party this year, there was still much room for sneaking in delegates for a given candidate even though he might not have been the most popular candidate.

Even so, the reformed system is still better than the old, when delegates were selected strictly on a political basis, and were "sold" to the highest bidder on the convention floor. The voters had no representation at all in those conventions, much as they don't in the Republican Party right now.

Still and all, we view Mr. Garrison's question and anger as good reasons for the national primary we have suggested several times. Under such a system, the ultimate candidate for the presidency would be selected according to the number of votes he collected, nationwide.

Granted, there would be additional expenses involved. But it would be no larger an expense, for example, than that accompanying the national conventions and the elaborate security measures they call for.

And the result would be a more confident electorate — confident that the men who ran for this nation's highest office were truly the choices of the people.

'There's nothing to do'

How many times have you heard it? "Man, there just isn't anything to do around here!"

That plaintive cry issuing from the mouth of a teenager usually means they want to leave the area for a night's fun, and it is supposed to be the crunching finale to an argument with Mom or Dad that has been going on all day.

The fact is, of course, that the argument just doesn't hold water. It is just plain natural for young people to want to wander around and see what's on the other side of the hill.

It seems there's less romance in local doings (the grass is always greener...?)

Proof? Well, young people are said to be quite fond of rock, and it is said they like to get out on the floor and wiggle around a bit to its beat.

Not here, though. The Paradise Community Center has been sponsoring dances at "The Roof" for several years. Last year, though, those dances lost popularity for some reason, and it wasn't too easy to keep them going.

This year, it's worse. Why? No one seems to know. The music is good, hard rock. The company is congenial. And the low price commands it. And yet last week's bash drew only 40 teens. "If this keeps up," an official complained, "we won't be able to continue these dances."

Well, they're trying again tonight. We hope for the best. After all, these people are trying to answer that "there's-nothing-to-do-around-here" complaint.

Unfortunately, it seems as if the teens are really telling us, "there's nothing we want to do around here!"

Changing of the guard

The Pennsylvania Story

Most exhilarating

Mason Denison

HARRISBURG — To Pennsylvania's quarter million unemployed the $9,600 compensation increase Pennsylvania's lawmakers voted themselves unquestionably will prove to be most exhilarating.

By the same token the more than three-quarter million Keystone Staters drawing their relief pittance most certainly will welcome the news that their elected representatives will have their compensation jumped from $15,600 to $25,200 a year.

And of course the thousands of Pennsylvanians left homeless and jobless as a result of the flood ravages of tropical storm Agnes will be jumping with joy over the thought that those they elected to look out for their interests are due for a 60 per cent compensation boost.

Average taxpayer

Then there is the average taxpayer whose income for full-time work doesn't even equal the $9,600 increase lawmakers have approved for themselves for their half-week legislative sessions (which many lawmakers contend should be ended by July 1 each year).

The interesting and intriguing part about all this is that those groups we've just mentioned — the unemployed, those on relief, the homeless and jobless flood victims, the average taxpayer — are the very ones who vote into (or out of) office the 253 members who make up Pennsylvania's Legislature.

Coincidental of course is the fact that this is the year — come this November — that all 203 of the seats in the House of Representatives will be up for refilling plus half the 50 seats in the Senate.

At this point lawmakers seeking re-election are rather furiously pointing out that they most certainly did not "vote for" the pay increase schedule to become effective August 21.

Jeffrey Hart

Well, the Legislature has 60 days from the time the commission issued its poverty pay increase "recommendations" to vote down the proposal. The commission issued its manifesto June 2 which means the deadline for legislative rejection is August 21 — but the Legislature recessed July 7 until September 11 (of course without taking any "negative" action).

It is interesting to note that lawmakers in many areas throughout the state now are issuing local statements abhorring the proposed pay increase, righteously declaring that if they had the opportunity they would indeed vote against it (knowing full well that opportunity will not be afforded them now that the Legislature is in recess!).

Technically they are right; the question of this specific pay increase never came before lawmakers for a direct vote — but what did come before lawmakers for vote was creation of the "Commonwealth Compensation Commission," the creature of the Legislature created to recommend pay increases to go into effect unless the Legislature votes to oppose such increases.

This way lawmakers are not faced with the embarrassing necessity of "directly" voting themselves pay increases — thus technically in an election year when they are up for re-election, as will be the case in November, it cannot be said that they "directly" voted for their pay increase!

Escape route

Inescapable is the fact that they did vote for the "escape route" Commonwealth Compensation Commission — which does the chore for them.

The point arises though that they could vote down the pay increase schedule enunciated by the commission.

They could?

Convention notes

MIAMI BEACH — There is plenty of bitterness in the background here. You find it in the delegate meetings and in the caucus rooms and in the anti-McGovern material circulating privately. But the striking thing on the surface is the general amenity and cheerfulness. Little jokes from the podium. An atmosphere of agreeableness on the convention floor. In addition to the regular campaign buttons, the ubiquitous funny ones: "Free Martha Mitchell," "I Am Grass Root," "Reliable Source," "Terry Sanford for President."

In many ways, The McGovern-Fraser procedural reforms are a great success. (Donald M. Fraser is the Minnesota Congressman and chief spokesman for the reformers.) Gone are the phony demonstrations long familiar on the convention floor. Gone are the ego-trip, favorite-son nominations and the interminable speeches. Even complicated, tension-filled issues like the California credentials fight are allowed only 20 minutes of debate time before the vote, 10 minutes for each side.

Once, when a delegation chairman tried to preface his vote count with some of the usual blah about The Great State Of, he was admonished from the chair:

"Just announce your yes and no votes, please." The result has been an immense gain in dignity and seriousness. The Republicans will make a big mistake next month if they come over TV with the old hoopla which had its roots in the gaslight era.

I mentioned above the bitterness of the anti-McGovern forces. They have only their own complacency to blame. Organized labor is circulating a 50-page, anti-McGovern document assuring the nominee of being a numbskull on Communism: "Senator McGovern sees Communism as being just another economic system," which 'some people want to be organized under.'" doubt that his 50-plus per cent of the delegates does accurately reflect the energy and organizing ability of his wing of the party — not at all negligible things to have represented. One is struck by the lack of these qualities in his rivals, the representatives of the "old" Democratic party, who somehow forgot to scramble for delegates.

That is George Meany's opinion of McGovern. The disaster is that Meany, in my opinion, is quite correct.

No one can really mourn the fate of Chicago Major Richard Daley, whose followers are still claiming that the seats of the Illinois Daley men were stolen by the convention vote. If so, it is a case of the bitter bit. Daley's theft of the 1960 election in Cook County for John F. Kennedy is one of the neglected scandals of American politics. Vacant lots and empty buildings and graveyards turned in solid Democratic majorities.

"After the votes were recorded," Bob Finch once remarked to me, "They threw the machines in the river. There was nothing we could do."

In actual fact, the 1960 Presidential election was stolen in Illinois and Texas. Dumping Daley was a national service, even if it was accomplished by the left-wing lettuce boycotters in New York and California.

I mentioned above the bitterness of the anti-McGovern forces. They have only their own complacency to blame. Organized labor is circulating a 50-page, anti-McGovern document assuring the nominee of being a numbskull on Communism: "Senator McGovern sees Communism as being just another economic system," which 'some people want to be organized under.'"

Post office game

In retrospect

By Bert Walter

It just had to happen and it didn't take too many people by surprise when the U.S. Postal Service announced that the Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg Post Offices would merge.

When East Stroudsburg moved into its large, new post office, people wondered why there were two new post offices in the boroughs, since at that time the East Stroudsburg facility was already a sectional mailing center. This meant that other postal facilities dropped their mail off at East Stroudsburg, where in turn it was sorted for the Lehigh Valley Exchange.

Now the renovated and expanded Stroudsburg postal facility is going into antiquity with nearly a wince over the thousands of taxpayers' dollars spent for this enlarged new facility, which "would provide a much greater service to the Stroudsburg area."

But what happened? In the name — it's always in the name — of better service, the U.S. Postal Service decided (or finally realized) it's rather silly to have two large new post offices not more than three miles apart with so much duplication of service.

So, as in the words of postal officials, we no longer have mail sorting in Stroudsburg and in East Stroudsburg, but just in East Stroudsburg. We also don't have a large contingent of men at Stroudsburg. They're being moved to East Stroudsburg to help those men sort the mail which used to be sorted in Stroudsburg. What we have here is a shuttle service of mailmen rather than the mail.

In a general sense, however, the work force in the two facilities will not be decreased when the complete operation is transferred to East Stroudsburg. Officials said no postal clerks nor carriers would lose their jobs.

In essence, everything remains the same except the mail distribution system and it is this which is supposed to save us so much money. We've heard that song before and rather doubt we will see the economy of this move in the future.

Rhodes pointed out there would no longer have to be duplicate supervisors for the two boroughs. East Stroudsburg Postmaster Stuart Marsh is retiring and so is the assistant postmaster at Stroudsburg. This leaves Rhodes and the assistant postmaster at East Stroudsburg as the top supervisory men. Fine. There is no duplication here, and points to an actual saving of wages for two men.

In the words of postal officials, we no longer have mail sorting in Stroudsburg and in East Stroudsburg, but just in East Stroudsburg. We also don't have a large contingent of men at Stroudsburg. They're being moved to East Stroudsburg to help those men sort the mail which used to be sorted in Stroudsburg. What we have here is a shuttle service of mailmen rather than the mail.

Merry-go-round

Cooling it

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — After the tumult and troubles of the Democratic Convention, the triumphant George McGovern is wondering how to convince labor lord George Meany and Chicago Mayor Richard Daley, that they should support him in November.

The two power brokers of the Stop McGovern movement are stubborn, angry and not easily appeased. Without Meany, McGovern can't get the backing of organized labor which has been essential to every Democratic presidential candidate in modern times.

Without Daley, the McGovern ticket will be in deep trouble in Illinois. And no president except Woodrow Wilson has been elected who lost Illinois.

McGovern sought the advice of his presidential rival, Hubert Humphrey, who was supported by Meany and Daley. "Let things cool for a while," Humphrey suggested. "Don't move too fast. Everybody's tempers are up. Everybody is locked into position. My advice is to cool it."

McGovern asked whether Humphrey would help bring Meany and Daley into the McGovern camp. "Nobody wants to be delivered and frequently they can't be," cautioned Humphrey. It would take a delicate personal relationship, he suggested, for McGovern to win over the two curmudgeons. Humphrey felt that his intervention now "might backfire." But "at the proper time," he thought he might "be of help."

For years, Humphrey and McGovern were close friends and next-door neighbors. Their friendship was strained, however, by their intense personal rivalry.

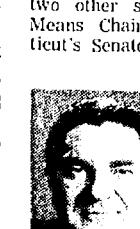

Humphrey's call

When Humphrey lost the crucial credentials fight on the opening night of the convention, he decided to withdraw his candidacy. He picked up the telephone to notify McGovern, who had already gone to bed.

"This is worth getting up for, George," said Humphrey. Then he explained his intention to withdraw and offered his good wishes. "Six months of competition in the political arena," he said, "can't destroy 10 years of being neighbors and friends."

McGovern asked his old friend's advice about a running mate. Senator Ted Kennedy had already turned down the vice presidential nomination because of family obligations, but McGovern hoped to persuade him to change his mind.

Humphrey agreed that Kennedy would add great strength to the ticket. Humphrey had two other suggestions — House Ways and Means Chairman Wilbur Mills and Connecticut's Senator Abraham Ribicoff. Mills would

The question of "representativeness" is a complex one, and, as I have noted recently, the McGovern delegates in many ways are not "representative Democrats." They are lefter, more affluent, more activist. Yet in a rough sort of way, the McGovern-Fraser reforms worked here too. True enough, George McGovern is supported by less than one-third of Democratic voters, according to the Gallup Poll, and here in the convention he is winning the key votes by very slim majorities.

The split is almost down the middle of the convention. So, in one sense, he is somewhat over-represented here. But there is also no doubt that his 50-plus per cent of the delegates does accurately reflect the energy and organizing ability of his wing of the party — not at all negligible things to have represented. One is struck by the lack of these qualities in his rivals, the representatives of the "old" Democratic party, who somehow forgot to scramble for delegates.

No one can really mourn the fate of Chicago Major Richard Daley, whose followers are still claiming that the seats of the Illinois Daley men were stolen by the convention vote. If so, it is a case of the biter bit. Daley's theft of the 1960 election in Cook County for John F. Kennedy is one of the neglected scandals of American politics. Vacant lots and empty buildings and graveyards turned in solid Democratic majorities.

"After the votes were recorded," Bob Finch once remarked to me, "They threw the machines in the river. There was nothing we could do."

In actual fact, the 1960 Presidential election was stolen in Illinois and Texas. Dumping Daley was a national service, even if it was accomplished by the left-wing lettuce boycotters in New York and California.

I mentioned above the bitterness of the anti-McGovern forces. They have only their own complacency to blame. Organized labor is circulating a 50-page, anti-McGovern document assuring the nominee of being a numbskull on Communism: "Senator McGovern sees Communism as being just 'another economic system,' which 'some people want to be organized under.'"

That is George Meany's opinion of McGovern. The disaster is that Meany, in my opinion, is quite correct.

Post office game

In retrospect

By Bert Walter

It just had to happen and it didn't take too many people by surprise when the U.S. Postal Service announced that the Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg Post Offices would merge.

When East Stroudsburg moved into its large, new post office, people wondered why there were two new post offices in the boroughs, since at that time the East Stroudsburg facility was already a sectional mailing center. This meant that other postal facilities dropped their mail off at East Stroudsburg, where in turn it was sorted for the Lehigh Valley Exchange.

Now the renovated and expanded Stroudsburg postal facility is going into antiquity with nary a wince over the thousands of taxpayers' dollars spent for this enlarged new facility, which "would provide a much greater service to the Stroudsburg area."

But what happened?

In the name — it's always in the name — of better service, the U.S. Postal Service decided (or finally realized) it's rather silly to have two large new post offices not more than three miles apart with so much duplication of service.

So, as in the words of postal officials, we no longer have mail sorting in Stroudsburg and in East Stroudsburg, but just in East Stroudsburg. We also don't have a large contingent of men at Stroudsburg. They're being moved to East Stroudsburg to help those men sort the mail which used to be sorted in Stroudsburg. What we have here is a shuttle service of mailmen rather than the mail.

Merry-go-round

Cooling it

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — After the tumult and troubles of the Democratic Convention, the triumphant George McGovern is wondering how to convince labor lord George Meany and Chicago Mayor Richard Daley, that they should support him in November.

The two power brokers of the Stop McGovern movement are stubborn, angry and not easily appeased. Without Meany, McGovern can't get the backing of organized labor which has been essential to every Democratic presidential candidate in modern times.

Without Daley, the McGovern ticket will be in deep trouble in Illinois. And no president except Woodrow Wilson has been elected who lost Illinois.

McGovern sought the advice of his presidential rival, Hubert Humphrey, who was supported by Meany and Daley. "Let things cool for a while," Humphrey suggested. "Don't move too fast. Everybody's tempers are up. Everybody is locked into position. My advice is to cool it."

McGovern asked whether Humphrey would help bring Meany and Daley into the McGovern camp. "Nobody wants to be delivered and frequently they can't be," cautioned Humphrey. "Let things cool for a while," Humphrey suggested. "Don't move too fast. Everybody's tempers are up. Everybody is locked into position. My advice is to cool it."

"Let things cool for a while," Humphrey suggested. "Don't move too fast. Everybody's tempers are up. Everybody is locked into position. My advice is to cool it."

For years, Humphrey and McGovern were close friends and next-door neighbors. Their friendship was strained, however, by their intense personal rivalry.

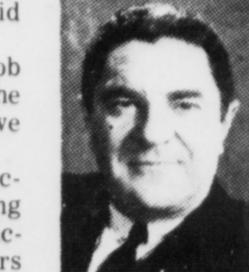

Humphrey's call

When Humphrey lost the crucial credentials fight on the opening night of the convention, he decided to withdraw his candidacy. He picked up the telephone to notify McGovern, who had already gone to bed.

"This is worth getting up for, George," said Humphrey. Then he explained his intention to withdraw and offered his good wishes. "Six months of competition in the political arena," he said, "can't destroy 10 years of being neighbors and friends."

McGovern asked his old friend's advice about a running mate. Senator Ted Kennedy had already turned down the vice presidential nomination because of family obligations, but McGovern hoped to persuade him to change his mind.

Humphrey agreed that Kennedy would add great strength to the ticket. Humphrey had two other suggestions — House Ways and Means Chairman Wilbur Mills and Connecticut's Senator Abraham Ribicoff. Mills would

Paget's Disease drug

A new drug, calcitonin, is still in its investigational state, but already seems to be important in the treatment of Paget's disease. This strange illness affects the bones and causes bone destruction and then regeneration and finally, a deformity.

As more and more is learned about the disease, it is known that certain changes occur in the blood chemistry which suggests the diagnosis. This is always confirmed by X-ray, especially of the skull. When the condition is allowed to progress, many strange disorders affect other organs of the body.

Now that the condition can be more readily diagnosed, it is hoped that this new drug will keep Paget's disease at a level of control, and alleviate the bone pain.

Fungus infections are an unpleasant complication of the prolonged use of antibiotics. There are, of course, other reasons for fungus infections in the mouth, in the intestines, and the vagina.

A new drug, flucytosine, is being tried in some cases of very severe meningitis caused by a fungus. It seems to be far less toxic than the drugs that are now available.

As a physician in practice, I am constantly impressed by the many scientists who continue to expand our knowledge by seeking and finding better, more useful, and less toxic drugs. Their patience and dedication are always a source of gratification.

Rizzo throws support to Nixon

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Frank L. Rizzo is the Democratic mayor of the nation's fourth largest city. Richard M. Nixon is a Republican President. Rizzo is voting for Nixon in November.

Calling himself an "unorthodox politician," the mayor Tuesday confirmed the worst suspicions of the city's Democratic organization, vowing to "do anything and everything in my power to bring about the defeat of Sen. McGovern."

The former police chief, who has repeatedly called Nixon "the greatest President this country has ever had," told newsmen at his weekly news conference he will vote for Nixon in November and "urge all my friends" to do the same.

"If a man is the right man, I will vote for him no matter what his party," Rizzo added.

Rizzo, whose city carried Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey to a state-wide victory four years ago, said he hopes to keep McGovern's majority in the city down to between 100,000 and 150,000 in November. "There is no doubt in my mind," he said, "that the people of Philadelphia will never go for Sen. McGovern. This means he'll lose the state."

The mayor said he is "entertaining the thought" of heading a Democrats for Nixon movement in the state and may speak on Nixon's behalf during the upcoming campaign.

"The worst thing that could happen is if Sen. McGovern is elected," Rizzo declared. "He wears more hats than the Stetson Co."

"Sen. McGovern, as far as making deals is concerned, makes some professional politicians I know look like daisies."

Rizzo expressed concern over some of the "radical groups" that support McGovern. "I look and see a clown like Jerry Rubin and groups like SDS... and if I had people like that on my side, I wouldn't care if I ever won an election."

Referring to his Democratic colleague in Chicago, Mayor Richard Daley, Rizzo noted, "he doesn't seem over-enthused by the Democratic candidate for President either."

Of his split with Democratic city chairman, state Sen. Peter Camiel, the mayor said, "I don't tell him what to do, and he doesn't tell me what to do." Camiel has said he will throw his support behind the entire Democratic ticket.

"I'll never leave the Democratic Party," Rizzo said, promising to support all local party candidates on the basis McGovern and his supporters don't represent the party.

"If he (McGovern) is elected," the mayor laughed, "I have a standing order to buy a ticket for Australia."

LCB requires breweries to maintain lower prices

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board (LCB) adopted new regulations Tuesday requiring breweries to maintain price cuts for at least six months.

Alexander J. Jaffurs, LCB counsel, said the rule would control "predatory pricing" by large breweries — a practice which threatens to put smaller breweries out of business.

"Large manufacturers, usually from outside Pennsylvania, have been selling their products to Pennsylvania wholesalers from time to time at temporary prices below that of in-state breweries," Jaffurs said.

He explained that the breweries maintain the low prices for only a short period of time "but long enough to win over some permanent wholesale customers from the smaller Pennsylvania breweries."

He said the large breweries subsequently raise beer prices again, but the wholesalers don't switch back to the in-state companies.

"Ironically," Jaffurs added,

Javits wants Agnew dumped

By United Press International
A key Republican urged President Nixon Tuesday to either dump Vice President Spiro T. Agnew from the Republican ticket or let the GOP convention pick its own choice for the No. 2 spot.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., did not single out his personal choice, but he said New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller or Sen. Edward W. Brooke of Massachusetts, the only Negro in the Senate, would strengthen Nixon's vote-getting power.

Brooke said last week, however, that he could see "no circumstances" under which he would accept the vice presidential nomination.

"If Nixon wants to run with Vice President Agnew and that's his choice, I do not see that I could properly contest that," Javits said. But "if he leaves the field open, I would do my utmost" to convince the convention to find another candidate.

Javits denounced Agnew's "name-calling" which he said "adds nothing to the substance of debate." But Javits apparently is not ready to accept a Democrat as a running mate for Nixon. He was decidedly cool toward former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally, who has been mentioned as a possible replacement.

Mobster business list favored

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Pennsylvania's attorney general said Tuesday that U. S. Attorney Richard Thornburgh's request for a public list of supposedly mobster-connected businesses was "an excellent idea" but was guarded as to when such a directory might be released.

"We are getting to work on it immediately," said a spokesman for Attorney General J. Shane Creamer. "It will take some time and effort to prepare the material to assure that it is fair and accurate. As in the past, we will be working with federal authorities to double check the materials."

Creamer's office responded to a request made Monday by Thornburgh, U. S. attorney for Western Pennsylvania, for a published list of "over 375 legitimate businesses which were involved in varying ways with criminal syndicates."

Fresh air to share? Jaycees have children

STROUDSBURG — "We feel that the Stroudsburgs have something to offer young children, and that a lot of people may want to share some of our fresh air and sunshine," Bob Jones, chairman of the Pocono Jaycees effort to bring children here in a fresh air program.

The children, all under 12, are all needy children, he emphasized and are being selected by the Child Care Service of Media and will be of all races and color. They will have been screened so there will be no major health or emotional problems.

"We don't expect host families to spend a lot of money on the children," Jones said. "What they need is to get out of the heat of the city and have fresh air, trees and birds. A ride in the country, a little league game, a fishing trip would be fine."

The number of children would be limited only by the number of homes available, he said.

The Jaycees plan to bring the first children in on Sunday, July 23.

"That's not much time for planning," he admitted, "but if we have openings for only ten children we would see that they got here, and then take them back on the bus on July 30 when we hope to be able to bring 30 or 40 children back."

Further information about the project may be obtained by calling Bob Jones 424-2588 after working hours, or at 421-3349 after 8 a.m.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

Mrs. John A. Bosner, Jr.
(Bob Jennings)

The fault lies not with the weather but with our way of life which makes it impossible to make the best possible use of what we are given.

Nobody with access to a pool and time to spend in it was uncomfortable over the weekend—it was the people trying to carry on with shopping, for instance, who burned their bottoms getting in cars which had stood too long in the sun.

The kids splashing barefoot through puddles didn't mind it but their elders went hobbling around in shoes which seemed to have shrunk two sizes overnight.

Chickens in the shade with their wings spread wide and people in hammocks under breeze-lifted branches were perfectly comfortable while mothers trying vainly to get the baby to take a nap in airless darkened rooms were not.

But speaking of how hot cars get sitting in the full sun reminded me of the parking lots in the Italian countryside where fresh cut branches were laid across uprights to shade the cars of customers.

Seems to me that our shopping centers and municipal parking lot designers in their efforts to squeeze in every possible car are missing a bet in not including trees along with the meters.

There's nothing hotter than a wide stretch of unbroken macadam where you can see the evaporating gasoline in the shimmering heat rising from the pavement. In contrast, those sesquicentennial trees along Main Street are now big enough to cast a perceptible shade—and, what is just as important, give an illusion of coolness. Not to mention replenishing the oxygen or whatever else it is trees do.

The answer to the question "Is it hot enough for you?" seems to depend in large degree on how you spend your summer days.

Wedding in Hawley for Rochester couple

HAWLEY — Miss Mary Pat McHale, 967 Chili Ave., Rochester, N.Y., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James McHale, 111 North St., Hawley and John A. Bosner, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bosner, Sr., Rochester, N.Y., were united in marriage on June 17, at 12 noon in Queen of Peace Catholic Church, Hawley, by the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John Randall. Daisies and summer floral arrangements decorated the church altars.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a gown of silk organza of empire design, having a high collar and bishop sleeves. Its bodice, skirt and Watteau train were appliqued and trimmed with re-embroidered Alencon lace. Her silk illusion elbow-length veil was caught to a band of seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses.

Carol Pascucci of Olean, N.Y., the honor attendant, wore a gown fashioned with a solid chiffon bodice and multi-floral skirt. The soft ruffled V-neckline and long sleeves were mint green. Her large picture hat was of matching color. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow and white daisies.

The bridesmaids were Katie McHale, Hawley; Phyllis Crum, Cleveland, Ohio and Maureen Bosner, Rochester, N.Y. Their gowns were identical to that of the maid of honor, but in colors of maize with matching picture hats. Each carried a cascade bouquet of yellow and white daisies.

Fresh air to share? Jaycees have children

STROUDSBURG — "We feel that the Stroudsburgs have something to offer young children, and that a lot of people may want to share some of our fresh air and sunshine," Bob Jones, chairman of the Pocono Jaycees effort to bring children here in a fresh air program.

The children, all under 12, are all needy children, he emphasized and are being selected by the Child Care Service of Media and will be of all races and color. They will have been screened so there will be no major health or emotional problems.

"We don't expect host families to spend a lot of money on the children," Jones said. "What they need is to get out of the heat of the city and have fresh air, trees and birds. A ride in the country, a little league game, a fishing trip would be fine."

The number of children would be limited only by the number of homes available, he said.

The Jaycees plan to bring the first children in on Sunday, July 23.

"That's not much time for planning," he admitted, "but if we have openings for only ten children we would see that they got here, and then take them back on the bus on July 30 when we hope to be able to bring 30 or 40 children back."

Further information about the project may be obtained by calling Bob Jones 424-2588 after working hours, or at 421-3349 after 8 a.m.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

The fault lies not with the weather but with our way of life which makes it impossible to make the best possible use of what we are given.

Nobody with access to a pool and time to spend in it was uncomfortable over the weekend—it was the people trying to carry on with shopping, for instance, who burned their bottoms getting in cars which had stood too long in the sun.

The kids splashing barefoot through puddles didn't mind it but their elders went hobbling around in shoes which seemed to have shrunk two sizes overnight.

Chickens in the shade with their wings spread wide and people in hammocks under breeze-lifted branches were perfectly comfortable while mothers trying vainly to get the baby to take a nap in airless darkened rooms were not.

But speaking of how hot cars get sitting in the full sun

reminded me of the parking lots in the Italian countryside where fresh cut branches were laid across uprights to shade the cars of customers.

Seems to me that our shopping centers and municipal parking lot designers in their efforts to squeeze in every possible car are missing a bet in not including trees along with the meters.

There's nothing hotter than a wide stretch of unbroken macadam where you can see the evaporating gasoline in the shimmering heat rising from the pavement. In contrast, those sesquicentennial trees along Main Street are now big enough to cast a perceptible shade—and, what is just as important, give an illusion of coolness. Not to mention replenishing the oxygen or whatever else it is trees do.

The answer to the question "Is it hot enough for you?" seems to depend in large degree on how you spend your summer days.

Wedding in Hawley for Rochester couple

HAWLEY — Miss Mary Pat McHale, 967 Chili Ave., Rochester, N.Y., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James McHale, 111 North St., Hawley and John A. Bosner, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bosner, Sr., Rochester, N.Y., were united in marriage on June 17, at 12 noon in Queen of Peace Catholic Church, Hawley, by the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John Randall. Daisies and summer floral arrangements decorated the church altars.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a gown of silk organza of empire design, having a high collar and bishop sleeves. Its bodice, skirt and Watteau train were appliqued and trimmed with embroidered Alencon lace. Her silk illusion elbow-length veil was caught to a band of seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses.

Carol Pascucci of Olean, N.Y., the honor attendant, wore a gown fashioned with a solid chiffon bodice and multi-floral skirt. The soft ruffled V-neckline and long sleeves were mint green. Her large picture hat was of matching color. She carried a cascade bouquet of green and white daisies.

The bridesmaids were Katie McHale, Hawley; Phyllis Crum, Cleveland, Ohio and Maureen Bosner, Rochester, N.Y. Their gowns were identical to that of the maid of honor, but in colors of maize with matching picture hats. Each carried a cascade bouquet of yellow and white daisies.

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — We have noted herin our intention to recognize a few of the Beautiful People, but not the so-called BP who populate the places to which they go to get their names in gossip columns such as this, to wheelie their photos into Women's Wear Daily and indulge in the strange, emptily aggrandizing world whose reward, is the same social vacuum from which they try to escape with the help of a press agent and a symbolic golden alpenstock. Instead, we'd like to try to celebrate the truly Beautiful People, of whom there are so few. We shan't try to fill a column daily or weekly with nominations. One of these finest of all really Beautiful People toddled off this mortal coil recently, and we made fleeting mention of his fine decency and marvelous contributions to the theatrical as well as his personal world.

His name was Thomas F. Carey, a Paulist priest who for more than 40 years ran The Blackfriars Guild, the very first off-Broadway theater in New York City. Father Tom was a modest, self-effacing, highly intelligent and effective minister to the most difficult of arts, the legitimate stage. He was a credit to the race of stage-struck citizens who so often taint their careers with compromise and ego and pursuit of "vanity" publicity.

Father Tom skipped all that. He gave his considerable energies to the proper presentation of his plays with the constant search for the best actors he could find. This was no minor task considering his performers were paid nothing except in experience. Still he was able through 40-some seasons to fill his stage at the Blackfriars on W. 57th St. with totally obscure mummery who in time lit up the Broadway stage and Hollywood film marques; some even lit up the bigger skies of the whole showbiz world. We'll get to them herein.

Father Tom's remarkably selfless and successful years when we received a letter from Mrs. Patricia Martin Corbett of Highland Lakes, N.J., whose memories of Father Tom Carey tell the tale of this posthumously beautiful career splendidly. What prompted Mrs. Corbett to write to us was the combination of our decades-long friendship with Father Carey and a N.Y. newspaper's dismissal of his life's journey into the dramatic arts with only passing notice that he "directed the Blackfriars Guild of New York."

That was hardly enough to satisfy Mrs. Corbett; nor properly to salute Father Tom: "One brief sentence hardly summed up a life of dedication not only to his faith and his church but to the Theater and to Lincoln legends was so concentrated that the people in the theater suggested he would never be satisfied until he was shot in a box in Ford's Theater.

Back in the 40s, before it was the "In" thing to be black, Father Carey presented a play about the Life of Blessed Martin de' Torres, the Church's first black saint. In the early 40s he also presented "Caulkie," a drama by a Father McGlynn, whose father in earlier turn had been the premiere actor of Abe Lincoln roles, whose dedication to Lincoln legends was so concentrated that the people in the theater suggested he would never be satisfied until he was shot in a box in Ford's Theater.

Frank McGlynn's priest son wrote "Caulkie" from a deeply felt point of reverse-fantasy — that the dominant race in the world was black and the whites were the subservient race; read "caulkie" for "nigger" and you have the instant mood of its plot. It started with blacks patronizingly commenting on whites, or caulkies, reversing all the ugly stereotypical insults, heavy and subtle.

"They're cute when they're babies," for openers, on up through the most sinfully degrading bigotries. It was a courageously fine dramatic idea. And Father Carey made it possible for such a thoughtful, enlightening notion to be brought to a predominantly white theater. It was healthy, not vicious; insightful, not inciting.

In the 50s he answered the slanderous "The Deputy" with Mrs. Corbett — you haven't.

Ps-s-s-t!

I used to think coat hangers (by virtue of their being oversexed and able to reproduce themselves in dark closets) would some day rule the world. Now I am convinced that it will only be a matter of time before we are under the rule of push-button aerosol cans.

The other day in my bathroom I counted 15 cans on the shelf all waiting to attack at the press of a button.

Now, I am the first to admit I am not too swift in the mornings. I stumble over lint and do not form words until well after lunch. So I stepped into my shower, grabbed a spray can and psst my head into a lather. Sleepily, I dried off, raised my arms and psst. Grabbed my toothbrush and psst. Combed my hair and psst. Opened my mouth and psst. Sprayed my feet with a psst, my wrists and behind each ear with another psst... and from habit cleared my sinuses with another psst up my nose.

1. I had shampooed my hair with shaving lotion and people wanted to dance close to it.

2. I had sprayed my underarms with tile cleaner and they wouldn't stop sparkling.

3. My teeth had been brushed with hair-setting lotion and my mouth was so manageable I was downright dull.

4. I had set my hair with deodorant which kept it so dry I was under surveillance by Smokey the Bear.

5. I sweetened my breath with glass cleaner and you could look right into my stomach.

6. I sprayed my feet with hair spray and my toes wouldn't stop curling.

7. I had perfumed myself with nose spray and my pores were breathing in and out like a stable of sweating horses.

8. I had shot my sinuses full of air freshener which is the first time I ever got high on Amy Vanderbilt.

The entire experience was rather frightening, especially when you realize that in the kitchen and the utility room there is an army of at least another 30 or 40 cans to deal with.

This morning, I paused outside of the bathroom door.

"What's wrong?" asked my husband.

"I don't want to go in there alone," I said. "It's a jungle." He handed me an aerosol can of bug spray. "Here, this can kill anything."

Sometimes, I think he's on "their" side.

Pregnant silence

By Jean Adams

SECOND TIME: (Q.) My mother believes my boy friend is on dope. This is not true. He did try it, but quit, and he told me if I ever tried it he would quit me.

His father kicked him out when he heard about the dope. He has been working and supporting himself but he is going into the Army soon.

I have to see him on the sneak because my mother hates him so.

I got pregnant with him once, but fell and had a miscarriage. Now I am pregnant again. I can't tell my mother. She has a bad heart and it would kill her. I don't know what to do. There is no one I can talk to.

15 and Scared in Pennsylvania

(A.) No matter how bad your mother's heart is, this is something that she and your father must know, so talk to them. You need their guidance in the decisions that must be made quickly now.

If they will not help you, go to a minister and ask for his help.

In reading your story, other girls will see the importance of adequate sex education at home, school or church, and of keeping open lines of communication between parents and children.

East wins with the king and later simply hangs onto his four clubs, feeling no pain at all as declarer cashes all his trumps. Reverend's code

Dear Ann Landers: Reverend C. Galea was assigned to the Guelph Correctional Centre for his summer work. During his time there he tried to help the young lawbreakers at the institution and eventually he developed an excellent rapport with them. He asked the boys to delve into their backgrounds for clues as to why they had ended up in that institution for delinquents. Then he asked them to draw up a code for parents, using as a basis for the code specific areas where their own parents had failed.

Here it is, Ann, and I hope you can find space for it in your column.

1. Keep cool. Don't loose your temper in the crunch. Keep the lid on when things go wrong. Kids need the reassurance that comes from controlled responses.

2. Don't get strung out from too much booze or too many pills. When we see our parents reaching for those crutches we get the idea that nobody goes out there alone, that it's perfectly O.K. to go for a bottle or a capsule when things get heavy. Remember, your children are great imitators. And we lose respect for parents who tell us to behave one way while they are behaving another way.

3. Bug us a little. Be strict and consistent in dishing out discipline. Show us who's boss. It gives us a feeling of security to know we've got some strong supports under us.

4. Don't blow your class. Keep the dignity of parenthood. Stay on that pedestal. Your children have put you there because they need someone to look up to. Don't try to dress, dance or talk like your kids. You embarrass us and you look ridiculous.

5. Light a candle. Show us the way. Tell us God is not dead, or sleeping, or on vacation. We need to believe in something bigger and stronger than ourselves.

6. Scare the hell out of us. If you catch us lying, stealing, or being cruel, get tough. Let us know why what we did was wrong. Impress on us the importance of not repeating such behavior. When we need punishment, dish it out.

But let us know you still love us, even though we have let you down. It'll make us think twice before we make the same move again.

7. Call our bluff. Make it clear that you mean what you say. Don't be wishy-washy. Don't compromise. And don't be intimidated by our threats to drop out of school or leave home. Stand firm. If you collapse, we will know we beat you down and we will not be happy about the "victory". Kids don't want everything they ask for.

8. Be honest with us. Tell the truth no matter what. And be straight-arrow about it. Lukewarm answers make us uneasy. We can smell uncertainty a mile away. This means being generous with praise. If you give us kids a few compliments once in a while we will be able to accept criticism more readily. We want you to tell it like it is.

From A Reader Who Loves Kids

Dear Reader: Thank you for your generous contribution to this space. The young lawbreakers who put together this guide for parents did a splendid job. And my warm regards to Reverend Galea. I can see why the kids love and respect him. Obviously he has us uneasy. We can smell uncertainty a mile away. This means being generous with praise. If you give us kids a few compliments once in a she is and she eats it up. She has a super boyfriend. I'm 17, a pimple-faced freak, miserable and unhappy.

What can I do? I've sent away for every "cure" under the sun. I've scrubbed my face raw with alcohol, laundry soap — you name it, Ann. I've tried it. Mom says I'll grow out of it. I can't wait that long. Please help me.

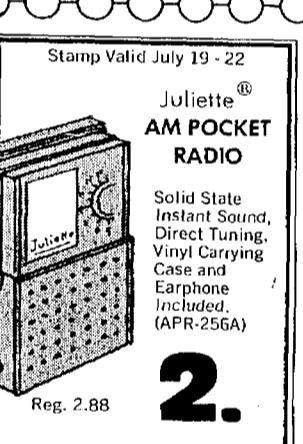

A Mess

Ann Landers

Reverend's code

Dear Ann Landers:
Reverend C. Galea was assigned to the Guelph Correctional Centre for his summer work. During his time there he tried to help the young lawbreakers at the institution and eventually he developed an excellent rapport with them. He asked the boys to delve into their backgrounds for clues as to why they had ended up in that institution for delinquents. Then he asked them to draw up a code for parents, using as a basis for the code specific areas where their own parents had failed.

Here it is, Ann, and I hope you can find space for it in your column.

1. Keep cool. Don't loose your temper in the crunch. Keep the lid on when things go wrong. Kids need the reassurance that comes from controlled responses.

2. Don't get strung out from too much booze or too many pills. When we see our parents reaching for those crutches we get the idea that nobody goes out there alone, that it's perfectly O.K. to go for a bottle or a capsule when things get heavy. Remember, your children are great imitators. And we lose respect for parents who tell us to behave one way while they are behaving another way.

3. Bug us a little. Be strict and consistent in dishing out discipline. Show us who's boss. It gives us a feeling of security to know we've got some strong supports under us.

4. Don't blow your class. Keep the dignity of parenthood. Stay on that pedestal. Your children have put you there because they need someone to look up to. Don't try to dress, dance or talk like your kids. You embarrass us and you look ridiculous.

5. Light a candle. Show us the way. Tell us God is not dead, or sleeping, or on vacation. We need to believe in something bigger and stronger than ourselves.

6. Scare the hell out of us. If you catch us lying, stealing, or being cruel, get tough. Let us know why what we did was wrong. Impress on us the importance of not repeating such behavior. When we need punishment, dish it out.

But let us know you still love us, even though we have let you down. It'll make us think twice before we make the same move again.

7. Call our bluff. Make it clear that you mean what you say. Don't be wishy-washy. Don't compromise. And don't be intimidated by our threats to drop out of school or leave home. Stand firm. If you collapse, we will know we beat you down and we will not be happy about the "victory". Kids don't want everything they ask for.

8. Be honest with us. Tell the truth no matter what. And be straight-arrow about it. Lukewarm answers make us uneasy. We can smell uncertainty a mile away. This means being generous with praise. If you give us kids a few compliments once in a while we will be able to accept criticism more readily. We want you to tell it like it is.

From A Reader Who Loves Kids

Dear Reader: Thank you for your generous contribution to this space. The young lawbreakers who put together this guide for parents did a splendid job. And my warm regards to Reverend Galea. I can see why the kids love and respect him. Obviously he has a way of bringing out the best in them.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a beautiful 19-year-old sister. Everyone tells her how pretty she is and she eats it up. She has a super boyfriend. I'm 17, a pimple-faced freak, miserable and unhappy.

What can I do? I've sent away for every "cure" under the sun. I've scrubbed my face raw with alcohol, laundry soap — you name it. Ann, I've tried it. Mom says I'll grow out of it. I can't wait that long. Please help me.

State urges consumers to be careful

'Shoppers Guide to Surgery' set

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The Pennsylvania Insurance Department released a "Shopper's Guide to Surgery" Monday urging consumers to be just as suspicious of surgeons as they are of used car salesmen. Insurance Commissioner Herbert S. Denenberg, author of the guide, said it is designed to prevent consumers from becoming one of the almost 2 million patients who undergo needless surgery each year.

"Most surgeons are competent, conscientious, careful, and conservative," Denenberg said.

"Some are narrowly trained and tend to do what they are trained to do—operate.

"A small minority are knife-happy, incompetent and greedy. And there is a tendency for surgeons to do their work—which is to perform surgery."

Cites Nader study

The guide cites numerous studies and books, including one by Ralph Nader, which supports Denenberg's contention that "unnecessary surgery takes a needless toll of human lives and generates suffering, expense."

It said, for example, that a study by Columbia University School of Public Health and Administrative Medicine found that of 60 hysterectomies, one third were unnecessary and six more questionable.

Dan Bachman, director of Red Cross recovery operations, issued a progress report from his Harrisburg office which said over $10 million has been spent on a complete care spectrum for more than 40,000 persons in flood-ravaged areas throughout Pennsylvania.

According to Bachman, some $200,000 alone was spent on medical supplies and facilities. Included was aid for persons who had lost prescriptions, eyeglasses and dentures. The Red Cross further provided assistance with nursing and hospital costs.

The most recent tally shows five Army feeding stations and 17 other various canteens are still in operation.

insurance and hospitals.

Like the previous shopper's guides, this one brought immediate criticism.

Dr. George P. Rosemond, president of the Pennsylvania Medical Society, said Denenberg offered good advice but "cluttered it with all of the hackneyed bars of headline-happy pessimists."

Rosemond admitted there are some questionable surgical practices and some "bad apples," but said there are no accurate statistics on the amount of unjustified surgery.

If the insurance commissioner could have subverted his need for personal attention enough to stick to just the facts in his guide, he could have provided a generally valuable service," Rosemond said.

Rules are listed

The guide lists 14 rules consumers should obey in choosing a surgeon. Here are the highlights:

—Go to a general practitioner or internist instead of directly to a surgeon. They can serve to counterbalance a surgeon with too much faith in surgery.

—Make sure a surgeon is certified by one of the American Specialty Boards and is a member of the American College of Surgeons.

—Even if your family doctor and surgeon agree that surgery is necessary, consider getting a second opinion before subjecting yourself to surgery.

—Make sure your doctor and surgeon explain alternatives to surgery, the possible benefits and complications. Frankly discuss the fee.

Copies of the guide are available free by writing: Surgery Guide, Pennsylvania Insurance Department, Finance Building, Harrisburg, Pa. 17120.

Red Cross flood tab exceeds $10 million

HARRISBURG — The American Red Cross is still conducting flood recovery operations across the state and so far the tab has run its way to the $10 million mark, it was reported Tuesday.

Dan Bachman, director of Red Cross recovery operations, issued a progress report from his Harrisburg office which said over $10 million has been spent on a complete care spectrum for more than 40,000 persons in flood-ravaged areas throughout Pennsylvania.

According to Bachman, some $200,000 alone was spent on medical supplies and facilities. Included was aid for persons who had lost prescriptions, eyeglasses and dentures. The Red Cross further provided assistance with nursing and hospital costs.

Although the number of persons without housing of some kind has been drastically reduced with the availability of mobile homes and campers moved into the area, 14,384 people are still being fed by Red Cross and U.S. Army food stations.

The most recent tally shows five Army feeding stations and 17 other various canteens are still in operation.

The report also pointed out since the initial flood

SBA backs Nixon's decision

Agnes loan rules defended

OTTAWAY NEWS SERVICE

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The director of the Small Business Administration Tuesday strenuously defended President Nixon's decision to make special loan opportunities available only to victims of Hurricane Agnes.

Thomas S. Kleppe told a Senate committee that Agnes' victims were being singled out "on a one shot basis" because the devastated region suffers "much more unemployment" than any other area hit by a natural disaster in the recent past.

In addition, he said, many more businesses have been affected by the record-breaking floods in Pennsylvania and five other eastern states than is normally the case.

Kleppe also told the committee that while the SBA has continually advocated the abolition of all forgiveness loans to disaster victims, it was making an exception for Agnes victims under instructions from the White House.

The SBA administrator was continually queried by members of the Banking and Currency Committee who wished to know exactly why newly proposed and liberalized loan policies for Agnes victims could not be applied to all future disasters.

"I don't understand the reason for singling out Agnes because its devastation was more publicized than other disasters," said Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif.

The senator said that individuals in less well-known disaster areas "have suffered just as much" as Agnes victims. He was particularly concerned about his own state where several recent earthquakes, including one in Los Angeles, wreaked considerable damage.

Kleppe told Cranston and Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-

N.H., that their point was "fair" and well taken, but the administration had decided to make Agnes a "one shot" affair, basing the move on a precedent set in 1965 when Alaskan victims of a major earthquake received special loan assistance.

The administration's Agnes recovery plan, now before both the House and Senate, would alter for one time only the present interest rates for flood victims from five and an eighth per cent to one per cent.

In addition, it would allow qualified borrowers to receive the first $5,000 of an SBA loan as a non-repayable forgiveness grant. At present, a victim can receive only a $2,500 grant after paying back the first $500 of a loan at five and an eighth per cent.

Kleppe appeared before the Banking and Currency Committee not only to defend the Nixon Agnes program, but also to comment on other legislation aimed at altering permanent SBA loan policies for future disaster victims.

He addressed himself to a House-passed bill which would establish a $2,500 forgiveness grant with no requirement to pay back the first $500 borrowed. It would also make the balance repayable at no more than a three per cent interest rate.

Camelback acquires ski area

TANNERSVILLE — The Camelback Ski Corp. has purchased a ski area near Washington, Va. James A. Moore, corporation president and a Washington attorney, indicated it may be the first acquisition toward a chain owned by Camelback in Tannersville.

The Virginia site, formerly known as "Skyline" or "Big Devil" was underfinanced and "never really got off the ground," said a Camelback spokesman. No purchase price was disclosed.

Camelback will call the facility "Rappahannock," naming it after the nearby river and the county in which it is located. Rappahannock is in the Blue Ridge Mountains and near the Skyline Drive.

The ski area has a 650 foot vertical drop, with potential for a 1,100 foot vertical drop. The main emphasis presently is to improve the snowmaking system.

Existing facilities include a T-Bar and a day lodge with cafeteria facilities. Camelback may install a new chair lift this year, the spokesman said.

Skiing capacity is about 1,000 and the area is equipped for night skiing. Major expansion is planned after about two years, including the installation of more lifts and cutting more trails, as well as lodge improvements.

Invitations have been sent to the Monroe County Commissioners.

Schweiker requests boost in 'flood forgiveness' funds

OTTAWAY NEWS SERVICES

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Sen. Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., Tuesday introduced a seven-point bill which would increase forgiveness grants for Pennsylvania flood victims to $15,000.

At present individuals struck by the state's record-breaking flooding may receive only $5,000 from the Small Business Administration.

President Nixon last week proposed another plan which would provide eligible persons with a $5,000 non-repayable grant.

Schweiker, who co-sponsored Nixon's plan, said his new legislation would "significantly expand" upon that package and all other loan programs. He called the Administration bill "a step in the right direction."

The Senator said he believed about 200,000 individuals could qualify for the $15,000 non-repayable loans under his plan.

"When we spend billions of dollars fighting in Vietnam, and over $2.6 billion annually in foreign aid," he said, "I feel we must guarantee first-class federal assistance for American citizens and communities ravaged by floods, hurricanes, and other natural disasters."

Schweiker's bill, unlike the Administration's is directed toward permanent flood relief, not just assistance for those people struck by Hurricane Agnes.

The senator's legislation would also authorize the "immediate" designation of federal disaster areas by a state's governor and the President. This procedure, said Schweiker, would avoid the "massive paperwork justifications" which have delayed many relief operations in Pennsylvania and other ravaged states.

Other points in the Schweiker package provide:

— For "progress payments" to individuals and communities while construction work is continuing, rather than waiting for completion of the work before payment can be made.

— Federal disaster loans for "working capital" and "operating expenses" rather than just for reconstruction and repair expenses.

— Federal tax loss reimbursements for non-property as well as property tax losses.

— Disaster relief for rebuilding higher education institutions — both private and public.

"They have the same rights I do, but I think it's a little too late to tell him of his rights after he's committed the crime," added Gaston.

Gaston, mayor of White Township, served as co-moderator of the gathering with Pahaquarry Township Mayor Michael Mordkin and Hackettstown Mayor William Hoboken.

Mordkin, mayor of the smallest area population-wise involved in the discussion, recounted personal experiences with vandalism during the past six months.

"Some thugs burned down a church in my township on Decoration Day, dousing the place with gasoline and set it afire. The Federal Bureau of Investigation was called in because the land is owned by Tocks Island and thus is federal land, but they have yet to come up with anything. That's how precise these thugs are. My house was also vandalized," he said, showing a picture of the damage inflicted to those gathered in the second-floor courtroom.

"We obviously need more police," added Mordkin.

Mayor Thomas Vaida of Independence Township, farther south along the Delaware River, laid the blame concerning increased crime to the parents of the criminals.

Trustees split on thoughts about ESSC tuition hike

By CONRAD GROVE
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — East Stroudsburg State College trustees split on their reactions Tuesday afternoon to another possible student tuition hike, but indicated a special meeting may be called within two weeks to iron out differences.

Pennsylvania students face a $50 hike this September — bringing tuition costs to $350 a semester — and legislators are considering tacking on a similar amount.

While noting college trustees have extremely limited control over what the state Board of College and University Directors decide, Chairman Maxwell Cohen said he could "see no wrong" in recommending Harrisburg keep tuition rates stable.

That opinion wasn't shared by trustee Kennard Lewis, who replied: "I don't think that would endear us to the powers in Harrisburg by being obstinate toward them."

Trustee Dr. James Pahl lined up behind Lewis, contending it's not fair to ask taxpayers "to pay the burden for special citizens."

Cohen predicted student unrest should fees be raised and advised trustees they would "ultimately have to make a recommendation."

"I'm going to continue to say the cost to the student now is as high as it should go," stressed ESSC President Darrell Holmes. "I think we ask a lot of our students who come from very limited means."

The Board of State College and University Presidents opposes another hike, he added.

ESSC's proposed budget for next year — still awaiting approval — figures about $4.1 million will come from tuition fees and other revenue. Another $50 increase per student would raise it about $150,000.

"I can't see any justification on our remaining important on this," stated Lee Mangan, appointed earlier this year as a student trustee. Mangan said tuition was $175 a semester when he came in 1968.

Holmes agreed with Cohen's suggestion to supply trustees with tuition schedules and other related costs at ESSC over the past 20 years. Trustees sharply criticized the $50 increase mandate several months ago.

In another matter, trustees approved concept plans for a nearly $2 million science building, scheduled for completion in 1975.

The General State Authority has provided $1.94 million for the project, including $172,000 for the purchase of 10 private homes on Normal Street and Ransberry Avenue, where the building would be located.

Holmes recommended trustees endorse the plans so state officials "won't be arbitrary and capricious" with design specifications. ESSC saw 50 per cent lopped off funds for a proposed fine arts building earlier this year.

Architect Eugene McCarthy, of the Philadelphia firm of Thalheimer and Weitz, displayed building plans for the structure, designated as the hub of a future science complex.

The four-level brick building may later specialize in biological sciences, with the existing structure utilized for earth sciences and physics and a third proposed building for chemistry.

A large lecture hall will be connected to the building, which is capable of housing about 300 students.

Holmes also reported administrators met earlier in the day "to plan how to plan" for nursing curricula. A preliminary proposal must be submitted to the state Board of Nursing Examiners by Oct. 1. Target date for the program is September, 1973.

Housing authority ignores deposit rise — and crowd

EAST STROUDSBURG — Dr. William J. Hein, assistant to the president at Mills College, Oakland, Calif., has been appointed vice-president and dean of academic affairs at East Stroudsburg State College.

Hein, 50, will replace Dr. Francis McGarry, retiring at the end of the summer session. Hein will assume his duties Aug. 1.

College President Darrell Holmes told trustees Tuesday Hein is "a doer with a broad educational understanding."

He said Hein's educational philosophy follows East Stroudsburg's toward a liberal arts based education.

Hein received his doctorate from Stanford University and other degrees from San Francisco State College.

Promotions in academic rank were granted to 16 faculty members on Holmes' recommendation. Six were promoted to professor, nine to associate professor and one to assistant professor.

New professors are Dr. Peter Bedrosian, head of the psychology department; Dr. Philip J. Briggs, political science; Dr. Thomas Eshelman, foreign language; Dr. Joseph Kernaghan, early childhood education; Dr. John Mikula, professional and secondary education, and Dr. Philip Pfatteicher, English.

Associate professors are Dr. Hal Cartwright, political science; Aurora Gonzales, foreign language; Bruce Hayne, physical therapist and physical education; Neil Hogan, history; Dr. John Kovakoski, psychology; Rosemary McMahon, early childhood education; Robert Schramm, chemistry; Ronald Schwartz, early childhood education, and Dr. Philip Pfatteicher, English.

Long POND — The Tunkhannock Township supervisors have scheduled a special meeting for 7:30 p.m. today in the Township Community House for the purpose of discussing means to prevent future rock festivals in the township.

Existing facilities include a T-Bar and a day lodge with cafeteria facilities. Camelback may install a new chair lift this year, the spokesman said.

STROUDSBURG — Doubled damage deposits in Monroe County public housing received no mention Tuesday as the Housing Authority Board met in regular monthly session.

A hike of security deposits had been followed by protest among residents in the projects living on fixed incomes. The $25 to $50 increase went into effect this month.

Despite the fact a protest had been aired and residents waited in the outer office to discuss the matter, board members were not presented with the issue on the monthly agenda.

A promise from board chairman Stuart Pipher to raise the issue fell through when Pipher failed to appear for the meeting.

He said the Brook Amendment, passed earlier this year, would reduce rent for welfare recipients in public housing.

"We're going to stay solvent as long as we can," Van Sciver said. "We'll just cut expenses and get along without subsidies."

EAST STROUDSBURG — Lumber, tree limbs, silt and cast-off debris obstructing the Sambo Creek will send the East Stroudsburg Borough Council to the state for assistance.

The council Tuesday heard a report on the conditions of Nationwide, the law will mean a drop of $400 million for public housing. To subsidize the loss, only $176 million would be appropriated, he added.

Locally, the new law will mean a revenue loss of $22,000 for the 156-unit public housing projects in Monroe County.

Van Sciver told board members he will cut costs wherever possible to absorb the losses. He said the authority would not apply for the subsidy because such action would require the agency to reduce its reserves back to 40 per cent of the budget.

"We're going to stay solvent as long as we can," Van Sciver said. "We'll just cut expenses and get along without subsidies."

N.J. boy hospitalized after being hit by car

EAST STROUDSBURG — A seven-year-old New Jersey boy is reported in satisfactory condition at the General Hospital of Monroe County after he was struck by an out-of-control automobile Monday night.

Keith Haubrick, of Arlington, N.J., was injured while walking along the entrance road to the Twin Falls Trailer Court in East Stroudsburg by a car operated by Joseph J. Fitzgerald, 66, of East Stroudsburg R.D. 2.

Fitzgerald's auto went out of control as it entered the trailer court and smashed into a parked auto owned by Thomas Slauer, of East Stroudsburg R.D. 1. It careened off, struck the boy and then collided with a mobile home owned by Fred Peters.

Pennsylvania State Police

from the Stroudsburg barracks investigated the mishap and estimated damages at $1,000 to Fitzgerald's auto, $600 to Slauer's and $800 to the mobile home. The extent of the boy's injuries were not revealed by hospital authorities.

At approximately 4 a.m. Tuesday, Stroudsburg troopers were called to the scene of a tractor-trailer accident at the intersection of Routes 209 and 209 Business in Marshalls Creek.

Council President Pearley Hunt said the borough now has only eight policemen in its normal 12-man force. He said the force should be brought to full strength as soon as possible for the protection of the citizenry.

Borough Manager Donald Gage replied the report on eligible applicants for police positions should be coming from civil service tests.

Council also executed an agreement with the Erie Lackawanna Railway Company for a voluntary contribution of $15,000 on a $3,000 per year basis toward payment of crossing guards to be provided by the borough and the East Stroudsburg School District.

Permission for the agreement was granted by the state Public Utilities Commission. Last year, the borough and the school district testified at hearings before the PUC to get approval of the crossing guards.

Council received a letter from East Stroudsburg State College assuring the borough necessary paper work was being done toward the demolition of a property on college property. The building is on Smith Street.

Hudson would prefer separate pro basketball leagues

By JOE MIEGOC

Pocono Record Reporter

TOBYHANNA — "If they merge, the players' associations in both leagues will have to get together and develop a plan for unified retirement benefits. If they don't merge, some of the weaker teams will have to drop out of basketball. I'd just as soon see them apart."

Lou Hudson, all-pro forward from the Atlanta Hawks of the National Basketball Assn., summed up his feelings about an item high on the agenda of professional basketball owners: the proposed merger of the NBA and the American Basketball Assn. Hudson was in the Poconos Tuesday at the Tobyhanna Sports Camp, serving as a guest lecturer for the camp's afternoon session.

"Years ago I'd think about it a lot and I'd have answers or opinions, but now I don't think about it a lot because it's been going on so long," he said about the merger, which he views as possibly eliminating many jobs for professional basketball players.

"I think whoever offers the most should get the most," said Hudson, referring to what he termed "the American way: competition. A man is only going to pay you what he can afford to. If he doesn't pay you enough, he doesn't get you. That's what it's all about."

Hudson, a 65 graduate of the University of Minnesota, has starred in the NBA since his entry into professional basketball in 1966, with the then St. Louis Hawks. At his height, he is a bit too big for the average NBA guard and a bit too quick for the average NBA forward.

"Well, you must have been reading the Sporting News or something," he said about recent stories concerning his settling down to playing one positions instead of his current "Swing-man" role. "I talked to the general manager (former Hawks' coach Richie Guerin) and a few other people and I think I'll be playing guard if I want to. And I want to," he added, laughing.

"It really doesn't make that much difference, though, because I love to play the game. I play well as a swingman, so I actually could play either position well."

Pete Maravich is also a member of the NBA Hawks and also plays guard. Could Hudson see any difficulty in Maravich's presence as to his own hopes of playing guard?

"I've never had any trouble playing with him. When he joined the team, he got a lot of publicity, some good and some bad. Some guys, like Bill Bridges, did have trouble with Pete because they were used to getting a rebound, passing it off and getting it right back. Maybe they had some trouble adjusting to a flamboyant-type player, but I had no trouble at all. In fact, my scoring average went up three points," said Hudson.

"Bridges had more trouble than I did because he was in the system longer than I was. He was on the other end, getting the ball. If you're really working to get the ball, you don't want to see a guy going in there and showboating a little bit. You worked hard to get the ball and he goes down and has some fun," said Hudson.

Hudson explained Atlanta's difficulties last season on the influx of seven new players into the team's system. Seven new players on a 12-man squad could make quite a difference in team play in terms of getting to know each other.

"We had our problems with so many new players, plus the fact that most of them were young, making us a young team. Two of the new guys we got last year were starters, forwards Don Adams, picked up from Houston, and Jim Washington, whom we got from Philadelphia for Bridges," said Hudson, adding that each of the seven new players was able to play quite a bit.

"I think we'll be able to play better together this year because most of these guys will have played with each other before. We had four rookies last season, but we'll have only two new players this season," he added.

Hudson also commented on the Boston Celtics, since he saw them at their peak in 1966 when he first came into the league and played against the Celtics last season when Boston won the title in the Atlantic Division of the Eastern Conference of the NBA. They've also had some trouble playing together.

"The thing about the Boston teams now, as compared to the teams they had years ago, is that they had played together for eight years then and now they're having trouble blending in with each other. If you put the guys together and keep them together, they blend well and play together well. They just need some time. I think they're a real good team right now," he said.

Hudson went on to say John Havlicek, the Celtics all-pro forward from Ohio State, posed no problems to him. "I have fairly decent nights against me. We're both the same size. But I do have problems with the shorter guards, like Kansas City's Nate Archibald and Calvin Murphy, especially if they're shooting well from the outside," said Hudson.

What does Lou think of Atlanta's chances this year in a strengthened NBA?

"I think we'll be a more seasoned team, since we'll have another year together. The better you relate to each other, the better you play together. We'll start the season with the team we hope will end the season and that's a big part of success. The league is tough, but we'll be up there," he said.

"You know, they shift the teams around so much these days that right now we really don't know who is in which division. In the case of Phoenix, they've changed a couple times. Chicago is kind of questionable because of a lease problems with the National Hockey League people in Chicago Stadium. Cincinnati moved to Kansas City. You never know how things are going to work out, but when the season starts I think things will jell and we'll be ready to go," he said.

Confident Ali primed for Lewis

DUBLIN (UPI) — Muhammad Ali, fast running out of opponents while he awaits Joe Frazier's pleasure, pits his speed and defensive boxing skill against the slugging of Al "Blue" Lewis when they meet in a 12-round bout Wednesday night.

Ali, pro boxing's travelling ambassador, is an overwhelming favorite to beat Lewis in the next stage of his comeback, which he hopes will lead to a second fight with Frazier.

In typical Ali fashion, the former heavyweight champion said: "Obviously he is not the best. I am. But I think Lewis is probably the most under-rated heavyweight in boxing. And he can hit. But I shall win."

The self-styled "champ" has cause to respect Lewis' punching power. Two years ago when he was preparing for his first fight with Jerry Quarry after an enforced 3-year lay-off, Lewis sent him crashing during a sparring session.

Ali was duly paid off for taking liberties with the Boss.

Lewis, who stands 6-foot, 4-in and expects to come in at around Ali's 218 pounds, said: "All that hollering and shouting inflates his courage. I heard it all before. He's gotta show what he can do."

The Detroit-based fighter who has knocked out 19 of his 34 opponents is known for the power of his punch.

Even before he lost the undisputed championship to Frazier, Ali experienced some discomfort against fast left hooks. The 29-year-old Lewis maintains this is his best punch.

"I am in shape because I have not had time to get out of shape," Ali said. "I don't have to be as fit to fight this one as I had to be for Quarry."

Even

Hudson would prefer separate pro basketball leagues

By JOE MIEGOC
Pocono Record Reporter

TOBYHANNA — "If they merge, the players' associations in both leagues will have to get together and develop a plan for unified retirement benefits. If they don't merge, some of the weaker teams will have to drop out of basketball. I'd just as soon see them apart."

Lou Hudson, all-pro forward-guard from the Atlanta Hawks of the National Basketball Assn., summed up his feelings about an item high on the agenda of professional basketball owners: the proposed merger of the NBA and the American Basketball Assn. Hudson was in the Poconos Tuesday at the Tobyhanna Sports Camp, serving as a guest lecturer for the camp's afternoon session.

"Years ago I'd think about it a lot and I'd have answers or opinions, but now I don't think about it a lot because it's been going on so long," he said about the merger, which he views as possibly eliminating many jobs for professional basketball players.

"I think whoever offers the most should get the most," said Hudson, referring to what he termed "the American way: competition. A man is only going to pay you what he can afford to. If he doesn't pay you enough, he doesn't get you. That's what it's all about."

Hudson, a 6-5 graduate of the University of Minnesota, has starred in the NBA since his entry into professional basketball in 1966, with the then St. Louis Hawks. At his height, he is a bit too big for the average NBA guard and a bit too quick for the average NBA forward.

"Well, you must have been reading the Sporting News or something," he said about recent stories concerning his settling down to playing one positions instead of his current "Swing-man" role. "I talked to the general manager (former Hawks' coach Richie Guerin) and a few other people and I think I'll be playing guard if I want to. And I want to," he added, laughing.

"It really doesn't make that much difference, though, because I love to play the game. I play well as a swingman, so I actually could play either position well."

Pete Maravich is also a member of the NBA Hawks and also plays guard. Could Hudson see any difficulty in Maravich's presence as to his own hopes of playing guard?

"I've never had any trouble playing with him. When he joined the team, he got a lot of publicity, some good and some bad. Some guys, like Bill Bridges, did have trouble with Pete because they were used to getting a rebound, passing it off and getting it right back. Maybe he had some trouble adjusting to a flamboyant-type player, but I had no trouble at all. In fact, my scoring average went up three points," said Hudson.

"Bridges had more trouble than I did because he was in the system longer than I was. He was on the other end, getting the ball. If you were really working to get the ball, you don't want to see a guy going in there and showboating a little bit. You worked hard to get the ball and he goes down and has some fun," said Hudson.

Hudson explained Atlanta's difficulties last season on the influx of seven new players into the team's system. Seven new players on a 12-man squad could make quite a difference in team play in terms of getting to know each other.

"We had our problems with so many new players, plus the fact that most of them were young, making us a young team. Two of the new guys we got last year were starters, forwards Don Adams, picked up from Houston, and Jim Washington, whom we got from Philadelphia for Bridges," said Hudson, adding that each of the seven new players was able to play quite a bit.

"I think we'll be able to play better together this year because most of these guys will have played with each other before. We had four rookies last season, but we'll have only two new players this season," he added.

Hudson also commented on the Boston Celtics, since he saw them at their peak in 1966 when he first came into the league and played against the Celtics last season when Boston won the title in the Atlantic Division of the Eastern Conference of the NBA. They've also had some trouble playing together.

"The thing about the Boston teams now, as compared to the teams they had years ago, is that they had played together for eight years then and now they're having trouble blending in with each other. If you put the guys together and keep them together, they blend well and play together well. They just need some time. I think they're a real good team right now," he said.

"You know, they shift the teams around so much these days that right now we really don't know who is in which division. In the case of Phoenix, they've changed a couple times. Chicago is kind of questionable because of a lease problems with the National Hockey League people in Chicago Stadium. Cincinnati moved to Kansas City. You never know how things are going to work out, but when the season starts I think things will jell and we'll be ready to go," he said.

Pennsylvania 500 field reaches 34

MOUNT POCONO — Thirty entries announced Tuesday for the July 30 running of the second annual Pennsylvania 500, including those of Dave Marcis, Jim Hurtubise and two-time Indianapolis 500 winner Al Unser, brings the total number of entries to 34.

Marcis, a NASCAR Grand National competitor, originally assigned to drive a 1972 Chevrolet Nova entered by David Deppe of Baraboo, Wisc., has now been assigned to drive the Roger Penske entry, the 1972 American Motors Sunoco Matador.

Penske assigned Marcis to the car after it was announced that Mark Donohue would be sidelined from auto racing for several weeks due to injuries received in the crash of his Can-Am Car at Atlanta. Marcis is a five-year veteran of the NASCAR ranks and regarded as one of stock car racing's most able drivers.

Unser, the 1970 and 1971 Indianapolis winner and the United States Auto Club national champion of 1970 will be driving a 1971 Ford Torino entered by R-A Hoerr, Inc. of Peoria, Ill. Unser competed in the 1971 Pennsylvania 500, but was sidelined after only 31 laps due to a blown engine.

Hurtubise, of North Tonawanda, N.Y., will be driving the Miller High Life

Monticello entries

Movie melange

'Red Hot Lovers' best of poor lot

By BRUCE COOK

Dow Jones-Ottawa News
Film and theater exist in an uneasy relationship, one best suggested by recalling George Bernard Shaw's gag about the British and the Americans being two peoples separated by a common language. Well, the idiom common to movies and plays is dialog — and oh, how it keeps them apart!

The fact that people open their mouths and talk in both media has caused no end of confusion and misunderstanding among critics, audiences, even among movie makers themselves. Film critics often seem to feel, for instance, that dialog in any movie should sound like that in a play: charged, witty, comprehensive, abundant, and anything but naturalistic.

Audiences are constantly disappointed when the movie versions of their favorite plays fail even to measure up to what they were on stage. And movie makers, who should know better, make a similar mistake when they assume that a hit play will make an even better movie.

Actually, something like the opposite is true. Until a couple of months ago, I would have said that no truly good movie had ever been made from a play. But then I saw "Play It Again, Sam," and I am no longer willing to generalize quite so recklessly. So, leaving open the possibility that the transition can be made to succeed, let's look at a few current movies-from-plays and ask why, in these films, it didn't.

"Carnal" with laughs
Neil Simon's "Last of the Red Hot Lovers" (Paramount) is the best of the bunch; it's not my idea of a good movie, but it may be your idea of an enjoyable night at the movies. You can go and laugh a lot, even learn something about its characters. It's sort of a good-natured "Carnal Knowledge". So accept my left-handed recommendation: I think you'll like it.

The title, of course, is purest irony: Fish restauranteur Barney Cashman is nobody's red hot lover. As Barney, Alan Arkin is all he should be: a basically decent, anxiety-ridden family man who stands on the threshold of male menopause surveying the sexual revolution and wondering why he can't get a little of the action.

His efforts in this direction are described in three separate episodes — would-be assignations at his mother's apartment, the only rendezvous available to him. His companions on these occasions are a neurotically promiscuous woman who has sought him out at his restaurant (Sally Kellerman), a show-biz nut whom he meets by chance in the park (Paula Prentiss), and a suburban matron (Renee Taylor) who is a friend of the family and comes to Barney because her own husband has been cheating on her.

Seams protrude
In effect, three one-act plays, just as they were when they were produced on the stage. Neil Simon, who did his own screenplay, has attempted to fill the dead space between them by introducing short prolog scenes, showing how Barney happened to make the date with each of the three women, but the seams still show. These are still one-act plays, quite acceptable in the theater, but not really on the screen, a medium obsessed with its own, quite different conventions of form.

And of course, as is nearly every movie made from a play, "Last of the Red Hot Lovers" is too talky, for playwrights tend to fill all available space with words. On a couple of occasions, we follow Arkin out on the street and around the house — a fine opportunity for this actor who can perform about as eloquently with his face as Richard Burton can with his voice. So what happens? Neil Simon has felt obliged to provide voice-over commentary from Arkin — Barney's "thoughts," as it were — where sight gags would have been more effective and far more cinematic.

More basic, though, is the difference in tone among the three one-actors. The second two are "merely" funny sketches, which might have been done by any superior gag writer. The first, however, is a real dramatic bite to it: Miss Kellerman is quite marvelous, and her performance is worth the movie. Yet coming early, it throws everything else out of balance, encouraging false hopes that the two that follow will rise to its level of serious comedy.

Self-help trap
Some movie producers feel that a novelist should never be allowed to adapt his own novel for the screen, the idea being that he will not be ruthless enough with his text, that he will continue to think of it as a novel rather than as a movie. They should be even more suspicious of playwrights, who are generally not as successful as screenwriters anyway. And conveniently here to prove my point is "Butterflies Are Free" (Columbia), that story of a blind boy who escapes his mother and shies off to Bohemia to find happiness with a lovable kook.

Playwright Leonard Gershe did his own screenplay — and that, of course, is just the trouble, for what was essentially a nice, sentimental, one-set, three-character play is still a nice, sentimental, one-set, three-character play.

"Butterflies Are Free" is not without merit, of course. Goldie Hawn is just right as the kook; she persuades you of the sudden change in her that the script calls for in its last minutes. And basically, let's face it: she's fun to watch.

Perplexing failure
About "The Happiness Cage" (Cinerama), from an off-Broadway play by Dennis Reardon of a couple of years back, I don't really have as much to say. And I don't mind admitting that I may be shirking my duty here, for its failure is in many ways the most perplexing of all.

It ought to succeed. The screenplay by Ron Whyte — not by playwright Reardon — makes it into a real movie, all right. There is a sense of flow and economy to it that is altogether atypical of most movies adapted from plays. Its story of brain-bending in the military is chilling in its implications for the future. And there are fine performances by two young actors, Christopher Walken and Ronny Cox, though the rest of the cast is not quite in their league.

"Butterflies Are Free" is still a nice, sentimental, one-set, three-character play.

Youngest of Cartwrights
his family's breadwinner

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Mitch Vogel, newest member of the Cartwright family on "Bonanza," is only 16 years old but he is the breadwinner and the man of his house.

The teen-ager with red hair and blue eyes lives in Burbank with his mother and grandmother. His parents went their separate ways more than five years ago.

Surgery left Mrs. Vogel unable to work, so Mitch — in addition to attending school — supports his family, which includes his younger sister, Kitty, 10.

Mitch is a sophomore this year with a "B" average in school. But he has little time for activities other than work in the series and studying. Sports and dating pretty coeds are out.

Instead of taking time for fun, Mitch is thinking of the future, forming a musical group, "The Sundowners." Eventually the youngster hopes to make personal appearances with the group and do some recordings.

When Vogel has an hour or so to himself he enjoys working on his magic act. Some day, he hopes, if the musical group is a success he can add his slight-of-hand dexterity to his performances.

At home Mitch relies on his mother and grandmother for the cooking chores, but not infrequently he and Kitty are stuck with doing the dishes. And there are flower beds to weed.

"Sometimes I don't know whether I have it much easier than kids did in the Ponderosa days," says Mitch. "But I wouldn't have it any other way. I can't see just sitting around."

Vacations escape Mitch now, too. "Bonanza" begins its shooting season in June —

There is a sense of flow and economy to it that is altogether atypical of most movies adapted from plays. Its story of brain-bending in the military is chilling in its implications for the future. And there are fine performances by two young actors, Christopher Walken and Ronny Cox, though the rest of the cast is not quite in their league.

"Butterflies Are Free" is not without merit, of course. Goldie Hawn is just right as the kook; she persuades you of the sudden change in her that the script calls for in its last minutes. And basically, let's face it: she's fun to watch.

More basic, though, is the difference in tone among the three one-actors. The second two are "merely" funny sketches, which might have been done by any superior gag writer. The first, however, has a real dramatic bite to it; Miss Kellerman is quite marvelous, and her performance is worth the movie. Yet coming early, it throws everything else out of balance, encouraging false hopes that the two that follow will rise to its level of serious comedy.

Youngest of Cartwrights his family's breadwinner

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Mitch Vogel, newest member of the Cartwright family on "Bonanza," is only 16 years old but he is the breadwinner and the man of his house.

The teen-ager with red hair and blue eyes lives in Burbank with his mother and grandmother. His parents went their separate ways more than five years ago.

Surgery left Mrs. Vogel unable to work, so Mitch — in addition to attending school — supports his family, which includes his younger sister, Kitty, 10.

Mitch is a sophomore this year with a "B" average in school. But he has little time for activities other than work in the series and studying. Sports and dating pretty coeds are out.

Instead of taking time for fun, Mitch is thinking of the future, forming a musical group, "The Sundowners." Eventually the youngster hopes to make personal appearances with the group and do some recordings.

When Vogel has an hour or so to himself he enjoys working on his magic act. Some day, he hopes, if the musical group is a success he can add his slight-of-hand dexterity to performances.

At home Mitch relies on his mother and grandmother for the cooking chores, but not infrequently he and Kitty are stuck with doing the dishes. And there are flower beds to weed.

"Sometimes I don't know whether I have it much easier than kids did in the Ponderosa days," says Mitch. "But I wouldn't have it any other way. I can't see just sitting around."

Vacations escape Mitch now, too. "Bonanza" begins its shooting season in June —

Medical unit construction underway

PALMERTON — Construction of Palmerton Hospital's medical unit in Gilbert is well underway, announced D.L. Gamble, president of the board of trustees.

The foundation has been completed, grading of the area accomplished, the septic system installed, and well drilling will take place shortly.

The 12 by 60 foot modular unit is anticipated to be placed on the foundation approximately July 21.

The land on which the medical unit will be located has been provided by the First National Bank of Palmerton, with a branch in Gilbert.

just when Mitch is escaping the classroom for the summer.

When the series is in progress, Mitch is up by 6 a.m. or earlier to report to Warner Bros. for work at 7:30. More often than not he leaves the studio by 6 p.m.

State laws govern the amount of time Mitch can work.

It breaks down like this: He can be on the set a maximum of eight hours. He is allowed to work four hours of that time, three hours for tutoring and another hour for lunch and recreation.

The show's stars, Lorne Greene and Mike Landon, are fond of Mitch and offer advice from time to time.

"I'll really miss Dan Blocker this year," said Mitch, who only joined the show as a regular last season. "He was one of the kindest men I've known in show business."

Mitch once played a guest spot on the series five years ago. Before becoming a regular of the horse opera he also appeared in "Ironside," "Adam-12," "The Virginian" and others.

When Mitch gets home in the evening he feeds his dog, a mutt named Shaggy he has owned for nine years. Three Mitch favors T shirts and flared slacks and open sports shirts most of the time. He likes steak but will settle for hamburger.

For the time being Mitch — who just got his driver license — must be content to pilot his mother's car around. But he is shopping for an inexpensive automobile of his own.

On weekends when the yard work is completed, Mitch takes a dip in the family pool or has a friend over for a game of pool on the billiard table in the den.

INTRODUCING WOODSTOCK</

Temporary executive mansion

Gov. Milton Shapp will move into this four-bedroom house on the West Shore of the Susquehanna in Wormleysburg. The governor and his wife have been homeless since flood water, damaged the Executive Mansion in Harrisburg. The state will lease the home at $400 a month. (UPI Telephoto)

Communications in state caught in tangled mess

HARRISBURG (UPI)—When the flood waters hit and telephone lines went down, the State Police answered the call for help with a statewide communications system.

But so did the Civil Defense, and the Turnpike Commission and the Justice Department, and the Department of Transportation, and the Department of Environmental Resources, and the Game Commission...

In simplest terms, the state's communications system was a mess.

No less than half a dozen agencies have their own conjunctions networks. All of them are different, so they could not be patched together in the emergency.

"I don't know of any crisis that wasn't attended to," Lt. Gov. Ernest P. Kline said in an interview, "but many could have been attended to more quickly and with less confusion if we had had better communications."

One weak link

Kline, who directed all flood operations, said the lack of an integrated communications system was the one weak link in

Bihari is hell in Bangladesh

DACCA (UPI)—Saida Banu, at the tender age of 7, is hungry, emotionally scarred and infinitely sad. She is all of these things because she is a Bihari.

The Biharis are a hated minority in Bangladesh, the new nation that emerged from the December war between India and Pakistan.

There are reasons for the hatred of the Biharis but the plight of Saida is more important.

Several days ago her little brother died, but Saida doesn't know why.

"He just died," she said.

The harried Bihari doctor in the camp where Saida lives like an animal was not sure why her brother died either.

"Probably malnutrition," he said wearily.

Saida gets a good ration of six ounces of wheat a day from the Bangladesh Red Cross. Some days are better than others, but not much.

"My grandmother gave me some rice today," she said. Questioning revealed that she had some curry made with potatoes along with the rice.

"I like rice better than wheat," said Saida, whose hair is cropped within half inch of her scalp, to prevent it from becoming infested with lice.

The more than a half million Biharis of Bangladesh, which until the war was Pakistan's eastern wing, are people without a country. Neither the winners nor the losers want them.

So they band together for protection in some of the most horrid ghettos in the world.

Saida and more than 40,000 an otherwise solid emergency effort.

"We forgot how much we depend on the telephone," he said. "With absolutely no criticism toward Bell, we should have had an alternate system ready."

Kline said the problem has been under study for years, "but nobody ever brought it to a conclusion."

The most extensive network belongs to the State Police, but it is inadequate even in normal day-to-day operations.

"Our system was installed in 1946, so to start with, the equipment we're using is 25 years old," Capt. Robert Bomboy, director of State Police communications, said. "It was engineered to take care of 250 radios. Now we have 100 base stations keeping in touch with 1,600 mobile units."

Bomboy said the equipment is so old that it has become "failure prone."

Too much traffic

"It just wasn't dependable in the flood," he said, "and in cases where it was workable, the messages were subject to interference because there was too much traffic. "There was no way to get around it. We just did the best we could."

The police had particular difficulty in rough terrain where antennae were inadequate to pull in messages.

A new system is in the works which would eliminate the need for electrical lines for power and telephone lines for transmission.

Each base station will have its own gasoline generator as a backup, and telephone lines will be replaced with microwave controls.

Instead of two frequencies, it will have nine. Each police car will have an additional portable sending unit so a trooper called away from the car still can receive messages.

Seek integration

But the new system cannot possibly be operational before mid 1974. In the meantime, state officials are searching for some way to integrate the other systems so they can be used as a State Police backup.

"The state police communications system is so far down the pike, I'm not sure any other state agency could be brought into it, nor am I sure it would be a good administrative idea," Kline said.

"They are 4,000 strong and have heavy traffic. But I don't see the need for independent systems for six, seven, eight other agencies."

James Kirkpatrick, the governor's director of communications, has been assigned the task of coordinating all the agencies.

He has proposed a single system with agencies assigned different frequencies. It would avoid the current duplication of facilities and give the state one, solid communications network which could be used in emergencies.

Ham radio operators

In addition, he has met with ham radio operators who provided communications services in the flood. They want the state to set up an emergency organization which will utilize their equipment and talents.

"My own guess is that this whole program is going to cost a lot of money," Kirkpatrick said. "The ham radio people have the sets and are willing to make them available, but the other equipment is going to be expensive."

He said additional money could come either from civil defense funds or from a special appropriation.

"It all depends on people taking it seriously," he said.

A very few Biharis have ventured out of the camps to try to find jobs but the great majority are afraid to leave what protection they find in their teeming ghettos.

"They come in groups of five to eight people at night," said Shahood Alam, 29, who before the fighting was a journalist on a Dacca newspaper published in Urdu, the language of Pakistan.

Alam denied government claims that Biharis no longer are dying in the camps.

Harrisburg — flood waters gone, but smell lingers on

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The smell of a flood still lingers in the capital city.

Even without looking, you know where the water swallowed up homes and businesses three weeks ago forcing 10,000 persons to flee and leaving 5,000 without jobs.

In the uptown section where the governor's mansion stands, the musty odor of wet wood fills the air.

Down along Cameron Street with its mud covered car dealerships and factories, a gasoline odor makes it hard to breathe.

And in the Shipoke section along the river at the south end of town, it just smells like sewage.

There were 3,000 homes damaged or destroyed and thousands of others had flooded basements. Four hundred were condemned in the Cameron and Shipoke sections. Large cardboard signs tacked to the doors proclaim them unsafe for use or occupancy.

Families need homes

About 300 families asked to move into mobile homes promised by the federal government. Only 59 have received theirs.

The damage figures finally are in—$19 million for private homes and $7 million for city property. The one newspaper publisher, the Patriot and Evening News, estimated damages to its plant at $2 million.

Exempt in the condemned homes which are boarded up, cleanup operations are in full swing. Water and electricity are in full supply. The city has removed 80,000 tons of debris with its 50 dump trucks.

Contractors and repairmen are doing record business, and new and used car sales are booming.

Two of the city's best known buildings, the Executive Mansion and the Farm Show, are dry but severely damaged.

The hand painted wall paper in the Mansion's drawing room is peeling off. Antique experts have been asked to restore it.

The kitchen appliances work but the heating and air condition ducts are full of mud.

In the state dining room, the inlaid hard wood floors have buckled, making walking perilous.

The furniture is piled in second floor rooms where it will stay until the floors can be replaced.

The outside walls are clean, but the ivy and grass have a light brown coating. The tops of the evergreen bushes are a rusty color, killed by the coating of oil which topped the flood waters.

Incredibly, the roses are blooming.

Gov. Milton J. Shapp, his wife, Muriel, and his dog have been living in a small apartment with Mrs. Shapp's brother.

The cramped arrangement will end this week when the Shapp's move across the river into a five-bedroom home in Camp Hill. One of the neighbors will be former Gov. Raymond P. Shafer.

The water in the Farm Show rose to 91 inches above the maid arena—three feet above the high water mark in 1936.

Biharis live in an eight-camp complex in a suburb of Dacca called Mohammedpur. There are a few khaki-clad, rifle-carrying Bengali police in the camps but some of the Biharis talk freely of their living conditions.

"Every fifth person in this camp has jaundice," said Anwar Eqbal, a Bihari who was a civil engineer before the Bengali struggle for independence began in March of last year. Biharis are now forbidden jobs because as non-Bengalis they supported Pakistan in the independence struggle.

"All of the people in the camps are jobless," he said. "They have no income at all."

To get money for necessities, such as salt and a few vegetables, people in the camps have begun to sell half of their wheat ration to Bengalis. They already have sold almost all of their meager possessions.

A very few Biharis have ventured out of the camps to try to find jobs but the great majority are afraid to leave what protection they find in their teeming ghettos.

Agnes' legacy: For Wilkes-Barre, worst is yet to come

By JOHN E. COONEY

Dow Jones-Offaway News Service

FORTY FORT, Pa. — For Bill Ulicny, life has settled into a grim routine.

Much of the day he shovels sludge out of his yellow and brown frame house that was inundated by the Susquehanna River during Tropical Storm Agnes.

He also spends a good deal of time at the luncheonette he opened a few blocks away only four days before the flood: He spends the time heaving ruined equipment into the street.

The rest of the time, he worries. That's the worst part. "When I think about what has happened to us, I start shaking," says the 38-year-old father of four, his eyes puffy and circled from fatigue.

That's a common reaction these days here in the Wyoming Valley, which appears to have been the area hardest hit during Agnes' devastating march from Virginia to Maine last month. The storm itself was bad enough: About 25,000 homes were seriously flooded in the valley, which has a population of about 300,000, and at least 50 persons lost their lives.

Forty Fort, across the river from Wilkes-Barre, gained an especially macabre footnote in newspaper accounts of the flooding: The overflowing Susquehanna washed up and deposited around town dozens of coffins from the local cemetery.

But for many residents of the area, the worst is yet to come. Despite all the public expressions of sympathy by state and U.S. officials and the untiring efforts of relief workers, it will be a long time before areas such as Forty Fort return to normal.

Debris is still piled high. National Guardsmen direct traffic, and it's nearly impossible to make telephone calls into or out of the area. Relief agencies are stretched to the limit, and a number of big employers have closed up shop permanently, raising unemployment to about 25 per cent of the work force.

Attorney trying to disarm British

CHICAGO (UPI) — Luis Kutner walked out of Long Kesh prison in Lisbon last week, took one look at a newspaper and walked back in.

He informed 21-year-old Patrick McDonnell the European Commission on Human Rights in Strasbourg, France, had just refused to consider their case against the British government.

It was another round lost in Kutner's fight to free his Irish clients—37 of them, all behind bars.

Kutner's clients are always behind bars. For Kutner, world expert in international habeas corpus and three-time Nobel Prize nominee, is a man whose legal reputation rests on his ability to get people out.

He's been doing it since the early 30s when he founded the Commission for International Due Process of Law. The commission headquartered in Chicago, fights to free people "unjustly" imprisoned, using as skeleton keys the Magna Carta, the Geneva Convention and the Human Rights Charter of the United Nations.

Despite the rejection, Kutner is not through with the commission.

He went there after petitioning the Queen of England—twice. He asked in the first petition that the internees, rounded up after the Special Powers Act of 1922 was invoked last August, be charged with a crime and tried, or released.

In a later petition filed last May he requested that she direct both Houses of Parliament to nullify the Special Powers Act because it is in violation of the Bill of Rights and the Magna Carta.

When her highness failed to respond, Kutner turned to Strasbourg.

The commission's rejection of his application, which seeks release of his clients and 20 million pounds sterling in damages for physical and psychological torture and arbitrary imprisonment, surprised and appalled Kutner.

"They rejected it saying I had no power of attorney," Kutner said. "That's totally inaccurate."

"The commission is obviously playing a political ball game and could care less about persons being imprisoned."

Patrick McDonnell, whose mother approached Kutner last fall during a visit to Chicago, wired the commission reaffirming Kutner was his lawyer.

"Please consider this application immediately," the wire read. "You may help prevent civil war."

Kutner will refile the application after more prisoners contact the commission confirming Kutner's power of attorney.

"I intend to get a hearing on this matter," Kutner said. "If it's not resolved here I'll go to the International Court of Justice."

Kutner, 64, is a dapper mustachioed advocate whose regal manner and British enunciation seem, at first, inconsistent with his irreverence for so-called authority. But he is a believer in "the law".

"You won't get these men out by lamentation or public demonstration, but by the rule of law," Kutner said. "The rule of law is the durable ligament for a civilized world".

It is through the channel of law that Kutner hopes to Politics and red tape have added to the misery. For a week after the flood, the Pennsylvania legislature refused to vote emergency funds because of a general budgetary squeak.

The Small Business Administration, which in emergencies can lend substantial sums to homeowners and businessmen, has been able to dispense only 20 loans totaling $53,900 of the more than 14,000 applications it has received in its Wilkes-Barre office; it has, however, processed more than 4,200 loans.

The dollars and cents extent of the devastation here has been driven home by the arrival on the scene of professional scavengers from as far away as Oklahoma. The scavengers buy partially damaged goods cheap and hope to make a profit by salvaging them.

"This is a pretty good haul around here," says one scavenger piling muddy dresses into a car backed up to a store in Wilkes-Barre. "I've been working my way north from Virginia."

For the Ulicny's, the losses have been staggering. The flood water welled up through the basement of the house they bought six years ago for $16,500, and it didn't stop until it was halfway up the first floor walls. There wasn't time to save many belongings. The water rose so fast — although their house is more than a half mile from the river — that it submerged their car before they realized what was happening.

Also, Bill Ulicny found himself helping man a rescue boat when he could have been rescuing his possessions, and his wife, Mary Ellen, was busy rounding up transportation to a friend's home six miles away where the Ulicny's and their four children are still living.

The loss of the luncheonette is especially sad. It was to be a fresh start for Bill, who had been unemployed for the prior year because of a blood-poisoning condition. Because of his illness and a dispute with management, Bill lost his job a year ago as a salesman with General Mills, where he had been employed since graduating from college in 1960.

Unable to get a job, Bill began thinking about going into business for himself. After checking into a number of small enterprises he decided to buy out the operator of "Norman's Luncheonette," an 11-stool diner on Wyoming Avenue, a block and a half from the Ulicny home.

To raise the $13,000 needed, Bill took a $10,000 second mortgage on his home and drained his bank account by $3,000. He spent an additional $500 to replenish the luncheonette's food stock.

On June 19, the diner opened under Bill's management. "It was great. I was working from five in the morning until six-thirty at night, but I loved it," he says.

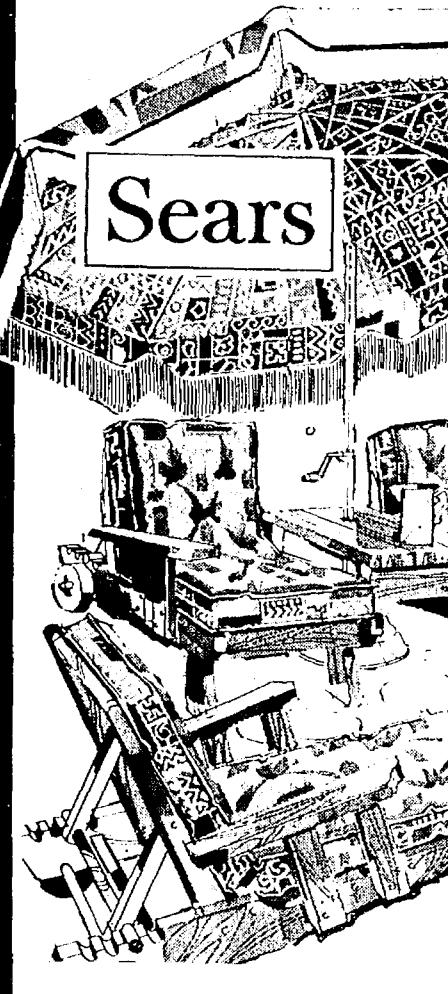

Adds Mary Ellen, "We'd lie awake at night talking about what we are going to do with all the money we're going to make. We were going to do some remodeling on the house and take a nice vacation next year. If only the flood had come a week earlier before we bought the place, or if we had only been going to buy it a week later."

Harris poll shows Nixon in lead at campaign outset

By LOUIS HARRIS

At the outset of the final run for the White House in November, President Nixon holds a wide lead on the issues over his newly nominated Democratic opponent, Sen. George McGovern. In a special test pitting the two men head-to-head, the American people told the Harris Survey they tended to agree with Nixon on 15 out of 16 key issues.

However, in two areas, cuts in defense spending and tax reform aimed at corporations and higher personal income brackets, Sen. McGovern draws close to even with Nixon or finishes ahead. It must be added that one of the singular marks of 1972 has been that voters appear to be unusually prone to respond to such pinpointed issues as these or the busing of school children to achieve racial balance, rather than the more traditional broad economic and foreign policy questions.

Here are some of the key issue areas in which President Nixon now holds a substantial lead:

— By 52-33 per cent, a majority feels it finds itself "personally in agreement" more with Nixon than Sen. McGovern on the key question of "ending U.S. involvement in Vietnam." But 76-16 per cent, a big majority at the same time expresses a desire "to bring home all U.S. troops, naval, and air forces from Vietnam."

— By 47-24 per cent, most Americans say they feel more in agreement with President Nixon than Sen. McGovern on the question of "checking rises in the cost of living." The public, however, favors a repositioning of price and wage controls by a 55-32 per cent margin.

— By 49-23 per cent, voters believe their own position is closer to President Nixon's on "busing children to school to achieve racial balance," an issue on which Gov. George Wallace rode to victory in a number of this spring's Democratic primaries. The public opposes busing to achieve integration by 81-14 per cent.

However, in two key issue areas, Senator McGovern shows real strength:

— By 35-34 per cent, a slim plurality feels itself more in agreement with Sen. McGovern than Nixon on "putting in tax reform to make higher income people and corporations pay higher taxes." An overwhelming 90-6 per cent would like to see such tax reform enacted.

— By 38-37 per cent, another one-per cent plurality holds the view that President Nixon rather than the South Dakota senator more nearly represents their views on "cutting down on defense spending." By a decisive 59-30 per cent, voters favor "cutbacks in defense spending."

The implication of these results is that at the beginning of the campaign, at least, if the dominant issue in the campaign were how to terminate U.S. involvement in Vietnam or how to control inflation, or what to do about school busing, the President would score heavily and might widen his current substantial lead over Senator McGovern. However, if the defense spending or tax reform issues were to become the central pivot of debate in the coming campaign, McGovern could make the election close indeed.

On the eve of the Democratic convention, from July 1-6, the Harris Survey polled a cross-section of 1901 households across the nation and asked this question:

"Now let me ask you whom you feel you personally would more agree with on the question of (read list) — President Nixon or Senator McGovern?"

New for fall clothing

NEW YORK (UPI)—The word for fall and winter clothes: simple, classic and luxurious.

They were used repeatedly during last week's preview of new lines for the nation's fashion reporters, an event sponsored by the New York Couture Business Council. They also described collections unveiled this week by the American Designer Showings.

One example of a simple and classic dress with a new twist was shown by Donald Brooks, an award-winning designer. It was a grey and white windowpane check dress that skinned the torso and had a rolled neckline up high. It actually circled the neck. The sleeves were short and closer to the shoulder than the elbow.

The new twist: the right side of the dress was made of fabric patterned black windowpanes on white. The left side had white windowpanes on black.

His patterns include herringbones in pales; Madras plaid with tattersol and tweed; brown woven polyester plaid, pincheck and sharkskin. All these are used in a variety of trouser, vests and jacket shapings matched with gingham, paisley shirts and soft woolen sweaters.

Jackets include the campaign jacket; the riding coat; the woodsman (more than a lumberjack shirt); the weekend or estate jacket; the Tyrolean.

New for fall clothing

NEW YORK (UPI)—The word for fall and winter clothes: simple, classic and luxurious.

They were used repeatedly during last week's preview of new lines for the nation's fashion reporters, an event sponsored by the New York Couture Business Council. They also described collections unveiled this week by the American Designer Showings.

One example of a simple and classic dress with a new twist was shown by Donald Brooks, an award-winning designer. It was a grey and white windowpane check dress that skimmed the torso and had a rolled neckline up high. It actually circled the neck. The sleeves were short and closer to the shoulder than the elbow.

The new twist: the right side of the dress was made of fabric patterned black windowpanes on white. The left side had white windowpanes on black.

Another of America's favorite designers, Bill Blass, showed feather-weight coats in tweed and plaid over skirts, blouses and dresses for day. The easiness of a sweater was done in a two-piece beige angora dress under a slim red coat with a swingy, tent shaped back. Luxurious was a navy cashmere coat worn over sable-colored pants and sweater.

The Blass rain collection for Bond Street was strictly classic. Favorite fabrics: poplin. Colors: clear. The shapes included tent toppers, creating a new soft proportion over pants. For all purpose wear there were short raglan-sleeved coats with kit fox collars.

The softened classic featured in the J. L. Sport Ltd. line designed by Kasper included "grow-up sportswear." That's how Kasper described the clothes to "go with today's informal lifestyles."

"The fact that women are wearing jackets and pants more and more throughout the day and evening only emphasizes this point," said Kasper. "Sportswear satisfies a very important wardrobe need and places a new fashion emphasis on the imaginative art of component coordination."

His patterns include herringbones in pales; Madras plaid with tattersol and tweed; brown woven polyester plaid, pincheck and sharkskin. All these are used in a variety of trouser, vests and jacket shapings matched with gingham, paisley shirts and soft woolen sweaters.

Jackets include the campaign jacket; the riding coat; the woodsman (more than a lumberjack shirt); the weekender or estate jacket; the Tyrolean.
